PSYCHOLINGUISTIC PHENOMENA IN MARKETING COMMUNICATIONS

Edited by

Tina M. Lowrey
University of Texas at San Antonio
Contents

Preface ix

Tina M. Lowrey

About the Contributors xiii

PART I: THE IMPACT OF MERE WORDS—THEIR MEANINGS AND SOUNDS 1

1 Linguistic Framing of Sensory Experience: There Is Some Accounting for Taste

JoAndrea Hoegg and Joseph W. Alba

2 The Mental Representation of Brand Names: Are Brand Names a Class by Themselves?

Possidonia F. D. Gontijo and Shi Zhang

3 Sounds Convey Meaning: The Implications of Phonetic Symbolism for Brand Name Construction

L. J. Shrum and Tina M. Lowrey

4 Phonology and Semantics in International Marketing: What Brand Name Translations Tell Us About Consumer Cognition

Shi Zhang and Bernd H. Schmitt

5 Phonology, Morphology, and Semantics: Toward a Fuller Conceptualization of Brand Name Meaning

Dawn B. Lerman
PART II: STRINGING WORDS TOGETHER—
THE IMPORTANCE OF SENTENCES

6 The Role of the Sentence and Its Importance in Marketing Communications
   Robert Meeds and Samuel D. Bradley

7 The Use and Abuse of Polysemy in Marketing Communications
   Claudia V. Dimofte and Richard F. Yalch

8 Road Map or Secret Weapon? The Role of Conceptual Metaphor in Shaping Marketing Communications About Exercise
   Barbara J. Phillips and Edward F. McQuarrie

PART III: STRINGING SENTENCES TOGETHER—TEXT AND NARRATIVE ANALYSES

9 Narrative Structure: Plot and Emotional Responses
   Jennifer Edson Escalas and Barbara B. Stern

10 The Role of Language and Images in the Creation and Use of Advertising Myths
   Rashmi Adaval

11 Indexical and Linguistic Channels in Speech Perception: Some Effects of Voiceovers on Advertising Outcomes
   Susannah V. Levi and David B. Pisoni

12 Dual Language Processing of Marketing Communications
   Ryall Carroll, David Luna, and Laura A. Peracchio

PART IV: AFTERWORD

13 Comprehension Processes in Advertising: Words, Sentences, and Narratives
   Robert S. Wyer, Jr.

Author Index 277

Subject Index 289