Enemies of Empire

New perspectives on imperialism, literature and historiography

Eóin Flannery and Angus Mitchell

EDITORS

FOUR COURTS PRESS
Contents

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS 7

CONTRIBUTORS 9

Introduction: empire, literature, history 11
   Eóin Flannery and Angus Mitchell

Fasting for the public: Irish and Indian sources of Marion Wallace Dunlop's 1909 hunger strike 19
   Joseph Lennon

Roger Casement: the evolution of an enemy of empire – I 40
   Angus Mitchell

'We are of necessity anti-imperialists': Irish republicans and empire, 1922–39 58
   Caoilfhionn Ní Bheacháin

Erskine Childers: the evolution of an enemy of empire – II 72
   Brian P. Murphy OSB

Fraudesia: the British South Africa Company and its enemies 101
   Stephen Donovan

Transient constructs: Soviet monuments and those of their enemies 113
   Talinn Grigor

Offshore Irelands; or, Hy-Brazil hybridized: utopian colonies and anti-colonial utopias, 1641–1760 130
   Michael Griffin

The use of Hiberno-English as a mouthpiece for Irish identity in the Irish Theatre: Synge's The Playboy of the Western World and the drama of Martin McDonagh 142
   Róisín Ni Ghairbhí

The language of empire and the empire of language: Joyce and the return of the postcolonial repressed 160
   Eugene O'Brien

Collateral language: empire, theory and idioms of authority 173
   Eóin Flannery
The limits of 'Irish Studies': historicism, culturalism, paternalism 189

Linda Connolly

Is the 'post' in 'post-totalitarian' the 'post' in 'postcolonial'? 211

Michael Kilburn

INDEX 225