

The International Thought of Herbert Butterfield

Edited by

Karl W. Schweizer

Professor

Department of Humanities

New Jersey Institute of Technology, USA

and

Paul Sharp

Professor of Political Science

University of Minnesota Duluth, USA

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

Foreword	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction	1
Part I Diplomatic History
1 Introduction	8
2 In Defence of Diplomatic History	13
3 Prussia's Attempt To Make Separate Peace with Napoleon After Jena	26
4 Austrian Policy and the Austrian Attempt To Bring About Peace	47
5 Crowe's Memorandum of 1 January 1907	69
6 Sir Edward Grey in July 1914	82
Part II Faith and Ethics in International Politics
7 Introduction	114
8 Christianity and Human Problems	120
9 Human Nature and Human Culpability	128
10 Morality and Human Progress	135
11 Moral Judgments in History	156
12 The Moral Framework of International Relations	166
Part III International Theory
13 Introduction	174
14 Notes for a Discussion on the Theory of International Politics	179
15 The Great Powers	186

16	The Historic 'States-Systems'	192
17	Comments on Hedley Bull's Paper on the Grotian Conception of International Relations	198
Part IV Diplomacy
18	Introduction	208
19	The Development of Diplomacy	215
20	The New Diplomacy and Historical Diplomacy	230
21	The Changing Moral Framework	240
22	The Balance of Power	258
	Conclusion	273
	Index	286