Representations of Death in Nineteenth-Century US Writing and Culture

Edited by

LUCY E. FRANK
University of Warwick, UK

ASHGATE
Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Notes on Contributors viii
Acknowledgements xi

Introduction
Curious Dreams: Representations of Death in Nineteenth-Century US Writing and Culture 1
Lucy Frank

Part 1 Death, Citizenship and the Politics of Mourning

1 Chief Seattle’s Afterlife: Mourning and Cross-Cultural Synthesis In Nineteenth-Century America 15
John J. Kucich

2 Escaping the ‘benumbing influence of a present embodied death’: The Politics of Mourning in 1850s African-American Writing 29
Jeffrey Steele

3 Representative Mournfulness: Nation and Race in the Time of Lincoln 43
Dana Luciano

4 ‘Stock in dead folk’: The Value of Black Mortality in Mark Twain’s The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn 61
Stephen Shapiro

5 ‘I cannot bear to be hurted any more’: Suicide as Dialectical Ideological Sign in Nineteenth-Century American Realism 77
Kevin Grauke

Joanne van der Woude
Part 2  Signatures and Elegies

7  ‘I think I was enchanted’: Elizabeth Barrett Browning’s Haunting of American Women Poets
   Alison Chapman 109

8  God’s Will, Not Mine: Child Death as a Theodicean Problem in Poetry by Nineteenth-Century American Women
   Paula Bernat Bennett 125

9  ‘The little coffin’: Anthologies, Conventions and Dead Children
   Jessica F. Roberts 141

Part 3  Cultures of Death

10  The Fashion of Mourning
    Ann Schofield 157

11  ‘At a distance from the scene of the atrocity’:
    Death and Detachment in Poe’s ‘The Mystery of Marie Rogêt’
    Elizabeth Carolyn Miller 173

12  Spectres on the New York Stage: The (Pepper’s) Ghost Craze of 1863
    Dassia N. Posner 189

13  Medusa’s Blinding Art: Mesmerism and Female Artistic Agency
    In Louisa May Alcott’s ‘A Pair of Eyes; or, Modern Magic’
    Ann Heilmann 205

14  “To surprise immortality”: Spiritualism and Shakerism
    in William Dean Howells’s The Undiscovered Country
    Kelly Richardson 217

Index 231