

Mapping Appetite
Essays on Food, Fiction and Culture

Edited by

Jopi Nyman and Pere Gallardo

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgments vii

Chapter One 1

Introduction: Setting the Table

Jopi Nyman and Pere Gallardó

Part I: Food, Fantasy and Fiction

Chapter Two 8

“An Aroma of Spices [...] Magnified the Sense of What It Meant to Live in England”: Travel, “Real” Food and “Misshapen” Identity

Inga Bryden

Chapter Three 28

Sweet Taste of India: Food Metaphors in Contemporary Indian

Fiction in English

Daniela Rogobete

Chapter Four 52

Culinary Cartographies of Multicultural London:

Constructions of the Urban through Foods and “Foodways”

Lia Blaj-Ward

Part II: Food, Power and the Popular

Chapter Five 68

Writing the Recipe for Subversion: The Creation of Patriarchy-Defying Communities by Means of Cookery

Miriam López-Rodríguez

Chapter Six 85

Dr. Frankenstein’s Technophobic Diet: “The Iron Chancellor,”

by Robert Silverberg

Pere Gallardo

Part III: Food, Identity and History

Chapter Seven.....	98
“We Call It English ‘Prosciutto’”: Food, Travel and Nation in Paul Richardson’s Cornucopia Jopi Nyman
Chapter Eight.....	114
Representations of Time in Cookery Articles Eleonora Chiavetta
Chapter Nine.....	132
Writing Women, Writing Food: African-American Women’s Cookbooks in Historical Perspective Hélène Le Dantec-Lowry
Contributors.....	150
Index.....	153