Leeds Working Papers in Victorian Studies
Volume 9

Victorian Soundscapes Revisited

Edited by
Martin Hewitt and Rachel Cowgill

Leeds Trinity and All Saints/Leeds Centre for Victorian Studies
Leeds University Centre for English Music
Contents

Roundtable: Victorian Soundscapes and the Potential for Interdisciplinary Exchange
Stephen Banfield, Delia da Sousa Correa, Rachel Cowgill, John Picker

Victorian Soundscapes Revisited
John Picker

Elevated aspirations versus limitations of reality: string Playing Style and Practice in Victorian England
David Milsom

The phenomenon of the cellist Auguste van Biene: from the Charing Cross Road to Brighton via Broadway
George Kennaway

Challenging the Victorian musical soundscape: ‘progressive’ repertoire and ‘The Working Men’s Society’
Michael Allis

Silences in the Sonnets from the Portuguese
Rhian Williams

Voicing, de-voicing and self-Silencing: Charles Kingsley’s stuttering Christian manliness
Louise Lee

Hearing velocity: the Doppler-effect in Mendelssohn’s song ‘Neue Liebe’
Julia H. Schröder

The sounds of industry in Dickens and Gaskell
Christopher Louttit
Instruments of ambivalence: Dante Gabriel Rossetti and aural anxiety after 1860
Karen Yuen

Musical diplomacy and Mary Gladstone’s diary
Phyllis Weliver

‘The exponent of the life and soul of the city’: The town hall as a music venue in the nineteenth century
Rachel Milestone

On the beat: the Victorian policeman as musician
Rachel Cowgill