Irish Literature: Feminist Perspectives

edited by

Patricia Coughlan and Tina O'Toole

Carysfort Press
Contents

Contributors ix
Acknowledgements xi

1 | Introduction 1
Patricia Coughlan

2 | Foreign Tyrants and Domestic Tyrants: the Public, the Private and Eighteenth-Century Irish Women's Writing 17
Clíona Ó Gallchoir

3 | 'Keening the Nation: The Bean Chaointe, the Sean Bhean Bhocht, and Women's Lament in Irish Nationalist Narrative' 39
Kathryn Conrad

4 | Selina Bunbury, the Pope and the Question of Location 59
Heidi Hansson

5 | 'Nomadic Subjects' in Katherine Cecil Thurston's Max 79
Tina O'Toole

6 | 'Almost Forgotten Names': Irish Women Poets of the 1930s, 1940s, and 1950s 99
Kathy D'Arcy
7 | The Love Poetry of Nuala Ní Dhomhnaill
Bríona Nic Dhiarmada

8 | “I am the Place in Which Things Happen”:
Invisible Immigrant Women Poets of Ireland'
Borbála Faragó

9 | Past, Present and Future. Patterns of
Otherness in Éilís Ní Dhuibhne’s Fiction
Giovanna Tallone

10 | Reclaiming Feminine Identities: Anne
Enright’s The Wig My Father Wore
Elke D’hoker

11 | ‘A Greedy Girl’ and a ‘National Thing’:
Gender and History in Anne Enright’s The Pleasure of Eliza Lynch
Susan Cahill

12 | Becoming-Mother-Machine: The Event of Field Day Vols IV & V
Claire Bracken

13 | Raising the Veil: Mystery, Myth, and Melancholia in Irish Studies
Moynagh Sullivan

Index