Stones of Law, Bricks of Shame
Narrating Imprisonment in the Victorian Age
Acknowledgments vii

Introduction 3
JAN ALBER AND FRANK LAUTERBACH

1 Victims or Vermin? Contradictions in Dickens’s Penal Philosophy 25
DAVID PAROISSIEN

2 New Prisons, New Criminals, New Masculinity: Dickens and Reade 46
JEREMY TAMBLING

3 Facing a Mirror: Philip Meadows Taylor’s Confessions of a Thug and the Politics of Imperial Self-Incrimination 70
MATTHEW KAISER

4 ‘Now, now, the door was down’: Dickens and Excarceration, 1841–2 89
ADAM HANSEN

5 Irish Prisoners and the Indictment of British Rule in the Writings of William Makepeace Thackeray and Anthony Trollope 112
LAURA BEROL

6 The Poetics of ‘Pattern Penitence’: ‘Pet Prisoners’ and Plagiarized Selves 134
ANNA SCHUR

7 Prisoners and Prisons in Reform Tracts of the Mid-Century 154
W.B. CARNOCHAN
8 Great Expectations, Self-Narration, and the Power of the Prison 171
SEAN C. GRASS

ANNE SCHWAN

10 The Sensational Prison and the (Un)Hidden Hand of Punishment 213
JASON HASLAM

11 Prisons of Stone and Mind: Henry James’s The Princess Casamassima and In the Cage 233
GRETA OLSON

12 Epilogue: Female Confinement in Sarah Waters’s Neo-Victorian Fiction 256
ROSARIO ARIAS

Contributors 279

Index 283