Contents

Notes on contributors ix
Introduction Robert J. Blyth and Keith Jeffery xiii

Histories of empire
On sources and authenticity: British imperial expansion and the writing of Asian histories, c. 1760–1830
Michael Dodson 3

‘What did you do in the war, Professor?’
Imperial history and propaganda, 1939–45
Simon J. Potter 24

The ‘civilising mission’?

Exploration, science and cross-cultural intimacy
Dane Kennedy 45

Born preachers? New Christians and the Qua Iboe mission, 1887–1920
Elaine Doyle 55

The natural history of society: the Orientalism of William Cooke Taylor
Patrick Maume 77

Impacts of the Asian empire

Empire, identity and barbarians: the British and China, 1750–1840
Ulrike Hillemann 97
‘L’enfant terrible of the ICS’: C. J. O’Donnell and the British administration of Bengal, 1872–82
Barry Crosbie 115

‘The land of gold and silver’: Indian students and their perceptions of Britain, 1907–39
Sumita Mukherjee 135

Enoch Powell against empire: the ‘New Commonwealth’, the Kenyan Asian crisis and the burdens of the past
Milla Schofield 151

Irish perspectives

‘The most outrageous Set of People that ever lived’: desertion, identity and Irish seamen of the Royal Navy in North America, 1745–1815
Martin Hubley 169

‘The White God of the Hindus’: John Nicholson as a British and Irish imperial hero
Michael Silvestri 196

French Canadians and the Irish question, 1900–21
Simon Jolivet 217

Patrick Pearse and Ireland’s position in the empire
Joost Augusteijn 235

Piet on peat: the Irish romance of Afrikaner anti-imperialism
Bill Nasson 253

Index 273