CONTENTS

Acknowledgements vii
List of Contributors ix
List of Figures xi

Introduction – Carolyn W. de la L. Oulton and SueAnn Schatz 1

I. Defining Women/Defining Men

1 ‘Social Suicide – Yes’: Sensational Legacies in Diana Tempest – Tamara Wagner 11
2 How to be a Feminist without Saying So: The New Woman and the New Man in Red Pottage – SueAnn Schatz 25
3 ‘The Bad Women are Better than the Good Ones’: The New Woman and Sexual Fall in the Short Fiction – Carolyn W. de la L. Oulton 37
4 Writing Women: narration and Literary Culture in the Short Fiction – Christine Bayles Kortsch 49
5 Cholmondeley’s Fables of Identity – Benedetta Bini 65

II. Creating Identities

6 Negotiating the Terms of Celebrity Culture: Cholmondeley’s Prefaces – Linda H. Peterson 75
7 ‘I Know that to be Untrue’: Belief and Reality in the Short Fiction – Jennifer M. Stolpa Flatt 87
8 Revising the Gothic: The Spiritual Female in ‘The Ghost of a Chance’ and ‘The End of the Dream’ – Karen Yuen 103
9 Guiding Spirit: Stella Benson’s Aunt Mary – Marlene Baldwin Davis 117

III. Past, Present, Future

10 Naturalized Imperialism in The Danvers Jewels: Reworking The Moonstone – Patricia Murphy 131
11 ‘Moth and Rust’: Cholmondeley’s Assessment of the Church of England – Brenda Ayres 147
12 Dreams of Futurity in ‘Votes for Men’ and ‘The Dark Cottage’ – Kirsty Bunting 161