Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Notes on Contributors ix

Introduction: Word and Self Estranged: Topographies of Meaning in Early Modern England
Philippa Kelly and L.E. Semler 1

Part 1 The Two-Way Mirror: The Natural and the Strange

1 Wittgenstein and Early English Dictionaries, 1604–1658
Julian Lamb 15

2 The Ruins of Persepolis: Grotesque Perception in Thomas Herbert’s Travels
L.E. Semler 33

3 Intimate Converse with Nature: Body and Touch in Harvey’s Way of Inquiry
Alan Salter 61

4 Dipsas and Traditions of the Serpent-Woman in Early Modern Literature
Alison V. Scott 73

Part 2 Shakespeare’s Estranged Words

5 Shakespeare and Authenticity: Teaching the Real Thing
Jean E. Howard 93

6 Estranging Word and Self in Twelfth Night
R.S. White 107

7 Desdemona’s Wooing: Towards a Pre-1538 Othello
Lawrence Warner 121

8 A Mind Diseased: Reading Lady Macbeth’s Madness
Christine Couche 135

Part 3 Re-Sounding Words

9 Topographies of Space, Time and Disciplinarity in Early Modern English: The Case of Andrew Marvell
Bob Hodge 151
10 The Text Estranged: Topographies of Irony in Chaucer and Milton
Ronald Bedford
167

11 Sounds of Elevation in Paradise Lost: God's Commendation of Abdiel
William Walker
183

12 By the Rivers of Babylon: Biblical Allusion and the Politics of Pastoral in Izaak Walton's The Compleat Angler
Kirsten Tranter
195

13 “Transitory Hieroglyphiques”: Deaf People and Signed Communication in Early Modern Theories of Language
Susannah Macready
205

Index
219