CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Prologue 1

PART ONE: The Form of Shame 9

CHAPTER ONE
Shame as Form 11
   Form and Disjunction: A Recent History 15
   Primo Levi's The Drowned and the Saved 20
   Three Preliminary Theses 23
   Postcolonial Shame and the Novel 41

CHAPTER TWO
Shame, Ventriloquy, and the Problem of the Cliché: 49
   Caryl Phillips 53
   Precipitation of Shame 53
   The Materiality of Postcolonial Shame 56
   Cambridge and Crossing the River 61
   The Poetics of Impossibility 66

PART TWO: The Time of Shame 73

CHAPTER THREE
The Shame of Belatedness: Late Style in V. S. Naipaul 75
   Being and Belatedness 78
   Late Style in Adorno 82
   Liber solemnis: The Enigma of Arrival 87
   Crystal of Shame: The Mimic Men 94

CHAPTER FOUR
Shame and Revolutionary Betrayal: Joseph Conrad, 100
   Ngũgĩ wa Thiong'o, Zoë Wicomb 100
   Hegel: Text as Antitext 103
   Joseph Conrad: Form as the Evacuation of Form 108
CONTENTS

Ngugi wa Thiong'o: The Imminence of Betrayal 115
Zoé Wicomb: The Difference of the Same 123
Alain Badiou: Subtraction versus Realization 128

PART THREE: The Event of Shame 135

CHAPTER FIVE
The Event of Shame in J. M. Coetzee 137
   The Problem of "Agency" 138
   Two Shames in Coetzee 142
   Diary of a Bad Year 146
   The New Direction 150
   Positively White: Slow Man and Corporeal Shame 153

CHAPTER SIX
Shame and Subtraction: Towards Postcolonial Writing 164
   The Origins of This Book: Michel Leiris 167
   Deleuze and Sartre 169
   Subtraction 173
   Louis Malle's L'Inde fantôme 178
   Towards Postcolonial Writing 187

Notes 193
Index 219