The Global Remapping of American Literature

Paul Giles
Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Acknowledgments ix
Introduction: The Deterritorialization of American Literature 1

Part One: Temporal Latitudes

1 Augustan American Literature: An Aesthetics of Extravagance 29
   Restoration Legacies: Cook and Byrd 29
   The Plantation Epic: Magnalia Christi Americana 42
   New World Topographies: Wheatley, Dwight, Alsop 55

2 Medieval American Literature: Antebellum Narratives and the “Map of the Infinite” 70
   Emerson, Longfellow, and the Longue Durée 70
   “Medieval” Mound Builders and the Archaeological Imagination 86
   Hawthorne, Melville, and the Question of Genealogy 97

Part Two: The Boundaries of the Nation

3 The Arcs of Modernism: Geography as Allegory 111
   Postbellum Cartographies: William Dean Howells 111
   Ethnic Palimpsests, National Standards 120
   “Description without Place”: Stevens, Stein, and Modernist Geographies 125

4 Suburb, Network, Homeland: National Space and the Rhetoric of Broadcasting 141
   “Voice of America”: Roth, Morrison, DeLillo 141
   Lost in Space: John Updike 154
   The MTV Generation: Wallace and Eggers 161

Part Three: Spatial Longitudes

5 Hemispheric Parallax: South America and the American South 183
   Rotating Perspectives: Bartram, Simms, Martí 183
   Regionalism and Pseudo-geography: Hurston and Bishop 199
   Mississippi Vulgate: Faulkner and Barthelme 212
Contents

6 Metaregionalism: The Global Pacific Northwest 223
   Reversible Coordinates: The Epistemology of Space 223
   Orient and Orientation: Snyder, Le Guin, Brautigan 232
   Virtual Canadas: Gibson and Coupland 242

Conclusion: American Literature and the Question of Circumference 255

Works Cited 269

Index 305