Women Writers and Detectives in Nineteenth-Century Crime Fiction
The Mothers of the Mystery Genre

Lucy Sussex
Contents

List of Illustrations viii
Foreword by Val McDermid ix
Acknowledgements xi

Introduction: Look for the Women 1
1 ‘Origins are Multifarious and Unclean!’: The Beginnings of Crime Fiction 6
2 Mrs Radcliffe as Conan Doyle? 26
3 ‘A Most Preposterous Organ of Wonder’: Catherine Crowe 45
4 ‘I’m a Thief-Taker, Young Lady’ 64
5 Getting Away with Murder: Mary Braddon 81
6 ‘Dead! And ... Never Called Me Mother’: Ellen (Mrs Henry) Wood 101
7 The (Feminine) Eye of the Law: Mary Helena Fortune 120
8 A Jill-of-All-Writing-Trades: Metta Victoria Fuller Victor (‘Seeley Regester’) 142
9 The Art of Murder: Anna Katharine Green 164

Conclusion: ‘She Has Got a Murderess in Manuscript in her Bedroom’ 183

A Timeline of Early True Crime and its Fictions 186
Bibliography 191
Index 206