SUBJECTIVITY IN THE AMERICAN PROTEST NOVEL

Kimberly S. Drake
Acknowledgments ix

1 Introduction: Determinism, Double Consciousness, and the Construction of Subjectivity in American Protest Novels 1

2 Rape, Repression, and Remainder: Racial Trauma in Wright's Early Novels 49

3 “Women on the Go”: Stereotype, Domesticity, and Street Culture in Ann Petry’s Fiction 89

4 “You Make Your Children Sick”: Domestic Ideology and Working-Class Female Identity in Tillie Olsen's Yonnondio and Sarah E. Wright's This Child's Gonna Live 131

5 Doing Time in/as “The Monster”: Subjectivity and Abjection in Narratives of Incarceration 175

Notes 199

Works Cited 231

Index 247