American Postmodernist Fiction and the Past

Theophilus Sawas
Contents

Acknowledgements ix

1 Introduction: Representing History, Re-presenting the Past 1

2 'Nothing but words': Chronicling and Storytelling in Robert Coover's The Public Burning 15
   The chronicler and synchronic history 17
   Nixon and diachronic history 22

3 'There is a world inside the world': Don DeLillo's Libra and Latent History 40
   The sum total of all the things they aren't telling us 42
   Contingency vs conspiracy? 49
   Branches of history 59

4 Pynchon Plays Dice: Mason O" Dixon and Quantum History 67
   A singular line and a singular time? 69
   Subjunctive spaces and subjunctive times; or, Pynchon's other worlds 82

5 'A long list of regrettable actions': William T. Vollmann's Symbolic History 95
   The Self and the Other: a dialogue through history 102
   History as transformation 110
   Trading for weapons 115
   Dreaming of America 120

6 'There is only narrative': E.L. Doctorow and Postmodernism 124
   Making the connections in history: The Book of Daniel 125
   History as a tune on a player piano: Ragtime 137
   'Denying history its rights': The March 146
7 Conclusion: Moving on from Postmodernism  156

Notes 164

Bibliography 189

Index 205