John Neal and Nineteenth-Century American Literature and Culture

Edited by Edward Watts and David J. Carlson

Lewishburg
Bucknell University Press
Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction, Headlong Enterprise: John Neal and Nineteenth-Century America
Edward Watts and David J. Carlson xi

| Chapter 1 | “I Must Resemble Nobody”: John Neal, Genre, and the Making of American Literary Nationalism 1
Matthew Pethers |
| --- | --- |
| Chapter 2 | “The Herbage of Death”: Haunted Environments in John Neal and James Fenimore Cooper 39
Matthew Wynn Sivils |
| Chapter 3 | Eyewitness to History: The Antinarrative Aesthetic of John Neal’s Seventy-Six 57
Jeffrey Insko |
| Chapter 4 | Notes on Poetic Push-Pin and the Writing of Life in John Neal’s Authorship 75
Jörg Thomas Richter |
| Chapter 5 | Celebrated Rubbish: John Neal and the Commercialization of Early American Romanticism 99
Maya Merlob |
| Chapter 6 | John Neal, the Rise of the Critick, and the Rise of American Art 123
Francesca Orestano |
Chapter 7  John Neal and John Dunn Hunter  145
Jonathan Elmer

Chapter 8  “Another Declaration of Independence”:  159
John Neal’s Rachel Dyer and the Assault on Precedent
David J. Carlson

Chapter 9  Here, There, and Everywhere: The Elusive  185
Regionalism of John Neal
Kerin Holt

Chapter 10  He Could Not Believe that Butchering Red Men  209
Was Serving Our Maker: “David Whicher” and the Indian Hater Tradition
Edward Watts

Chapter 11  John Neal and the Early Discourse of  227
American Women’s Rights
Karen A. Weyler

Chapter 12  “A Right Manly Man” in 1843: John Neal  247 on Women’s Rights and the Problem of Male Feminism
Fritz Fleischmann

Chapter 13  How John Neal Wrote His Autobiography  271
Kevin J. Hayes

Bibliography  283
Index  309
List of Contributors  319