Melville and the Wall of the Modern Age

Edited by
Arimichi Makino

NAN’UN-DO
TOKYO
2010
Contents

Editor's Note vii
Introduction Elizabeth Shultz ix

1 | The Modern Age as Ambiguous Wall:
   Melville from a Japanese Perspective
   Arimichi Makino 3

2 | Angels and Devils in the Pacific:
   American Foreign Missions and Typee
   Naochika Takao 21

3 | Captain Ahab's Cabin:
   Melville's Southern Connections in Moby-Dick
   Tomoyuki Zettsu 39

4 | Creating "Acosmos":
   Isabel's Possibilities in Pierre
   Masaki Horiuchi 57

5 | "Bartleby, the Scrivener":
   The Politics of Biography and the Future of Capitalism
   Ikuno Saiki 77

6 | The Wall of Modernization:
   "Bartleby, the Scrivener: A Story of Wall-Street"
   Keiko Fujie 97
Contents

7 Melville’s Criticism of Slavery:
American Hispanophobia in “Benito Cereno”
Shoko Tsuji 121

8 Mirrors of Madness:
The Confidence-Man and 19th-Century American Psychiatry
Yasunaka Hashimoto 143

9 Presenting Discord toward Harmony:
The Presence of Ungar in Clarel
Mikayo Sakuma 165

10 “Rip Van Winkle’s Lilac”:
Its Theme from the Viewpoints of Prose and Poetry
Mitsuru Sanada 185

11 A Way of Going to Paradise Twice:
Melville’s Late Visions of the Intersection of Race
Yukiko Oshima 207

Afterword
Kenzaburo Ohashi 231

Index
233