Invoking Slavery in the Eighteenth-Century British Imagination

Edited by
SRIVIDHYA SWAMINATHAN
LIU Brooklyn, USA

and

ADAM R. BEACH
Ball State University, USA

ASHGATE
Contents

List of Illustrations
Notes on Contributors
Acknowledgements

Introduction: Invoking Slavery in Literature and Scholarship
Srividhya Swaminathan and Adam R. Beach

Part 1  Invocations of “Foreign” or Captive Enslavement

1. The Good-Treatment Debate, Comparative Slave Studies, and the “Adventures” of T.S.
   Adam R. Beach
   21

2. Love’s Slave: Court Slaves in the Early Eighteenth-Century Imagination
   Amy Witherbee
   37

3. Defoe’s Captain Singleton: A Study of Enslavement
   Srividhya Swaminathan
   57

Part 2  Political Invocations of Slavery and Liberty

4. Slavery and Obedience in Restoration and Early Eighteenth-Century Drama
   Jeffrey Galbraith
   77

5. Hannah More’s Slavery and James Thomson’s Liberty: Fond Links, Mad Liberty, and Unfeeling Bondage
   Brett D. Wilson
   93

Part 3  Invocations of Slavery in British Systems of Servitude

6. “Servants Have the Worser Lives”: The Poetics and Rhetorics of Servitude and Slavery in Inkle and Yarico’s Barbados
   Laura Martin
   115

7. Indentured Servitude as Colonial America’s “Semi-Slavery Business” in Sally Gunning’s Bound
   Ann Campbell
   133

8. Slavey, or the New Drudge
   Roxann Wheeler
   153
Review Essay: Social Liberty and Social Death: Conceiving of Slavery Beyond the Black Atlantic
George Boulukos

Bibliography
Index