

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xiii
1 Unemployment in Britain and its psychological and political consequences for the unemployed	1
1.1 The context: unemployment	1
1.2 Consequences of unemployment: the contribution of psychology	4
1.3 Consequences of unemployment: political responses of the unemployed	7
1.4 Conclusions	21
1.5 Summary	22
2 Youth, unemployment, and political views	24
2.1 Youth unemployment	24
2.2 Analyses of 'youth' and studies of youth cultures	28
2.3 Youth unemployment: psychological studies	38
2.4 Youth, unemployment, and politics: psychological studies	41
2.5 The domain of politics	48
2.6 The research issues	52
2.7 Summary	53
3 Theoretical and methodological frameworks	54
3.1 Introduction	54
3.2 The theoretical framework	55
3.3 Ideologies and social representations	63
3.4 The methodological framework	68
3.5 Summary and conclusions	75
4 The research study	77
4.1 Introduction	77
4.2 The pilot study and preliminary preparations	77
4.3 The field work	80
4.4 Sample characteristics	90
4.5 Conventions for presenting interview material	94
4.6 Sample representativeness	96
5 The domain of the political. I.
Employment, unemployment, and youth training schemes	98
5.1 Introduction	98
5.2 Some general comments about employment	101

5.3	Discussions about employment	103
5.4	Unemployment	117
5.5	The Youth Training Scheme	126
5.6	Summary and conclusions	136
6	The domain of the political. II.	138
	Democracy and voting, racism, and marriage	138
6.1	Introduction	138
6.2	Social representations of democracy and voting	139
6.3	Racism and the interviews: an introduction	149
6.4	Social representations and 'marriage'	162
6.5	Summary and overview	172
7	Summary and issues for the future	176
7.1	Summary	176
7.2	Issues for the future	178
	Appendix I	184
	Appendix II	187
	Bibliography	189
	Index	202