

---

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	xi
1 Introduction	1
The Communist Legacy	4
China's Economic Transition Strategy	8
How Large?	14
China's Growth Prospects	18
China as a High-Performing Economy	22
Regional Fragmentation	25
Summary	27
2 China and the World Trading System	29
Commodity Composition	29
Direction of Trade	33
Trade Balance	35
Predicting China's Future Trade	37
China and the GATT	44
3 Participation in International Capital Markets	49
Borrowing from International Organizations	50
National Development Assistance	54
Commercial Borrowing and Securities Sales	58
Foreign Direct Investment	63
Implications of Investment for China's Trade	71
Summary	72

4	Economic Issues in US–China Relations	73
	Bilateral Trade Balance	73
	Intellectual Property Rights Protection	79
	Market Access	81
	Trade in Textiles	83
	Currency Manipulation	86
	Services	90
	Export Controls and Proliferation Sanctions	92
	The Legacy of the 1989 Sanctions	97
	Prison Labor Exports	98
	Most-Favored Nation Status	99
5	Conclusions and Policy Implications	105
	Will China Become a Global Economic Superpower?	106
	Is China a More Open Economy?	110
	Implications	115
	Recommendations for US Policy	124
	Summary	138
	Appendix	141
	China and the GATT—A Chronology
	References	145
	Index	149