Contents

Acknowledgments                                    vii

1. Background                                      1
   The Importance of On-the-Job Learning           3
   The Setting                                      6
   Cellsoft as a Learning Environment                11
   Method                                           12
   Overview                                         16

2. The Programmer's World                          19
   What Is a System?                                19
   What Programmers Do                             23
   Computer Jobs and the Computing World           25

3. The Participants                                37
   How They Came to Be Where They Are               37
   How They Got Started                             40
   What They Learned in School                     42
   School versus the World                         49
   Summary                                          52

4. Learning the Environment                        53
   Learning the Business                            53
   Getting Started in a New Job                    57
   Learning the Culture                             63
   Summary                                          66