Contents

Foreword v

Introduction xi

Acknowledgments xiii

Part I  The basics
Understanding and taking charge of your communications 1

1  Everything we do is communication 3
2  How you say it is what counts 11
3  Navigating the obstacle course: identifying and overcoming communication filters, barriers and incompatibilities 15
4  Behaviour breeds behaviour 23
5  Walk in another person’s shoes, or you’ll get nowhere 29
6  Conflict recipe: look for the common ground and beware the loser 35
7  Communication is a two-way street—you have to get as well as give 47

Part II  Giving good information
Saying how things are from your point of view 51

8  Avoid the 11 deadly sins of communication 53
9  Step off on the right foot—for this will determine the outcome 65
Appendix 1 Model framing answers for practice exercises 73

10 Choose your words for clarity and power 77

Appendix 2 Some word meanings: ‘order’ and ‘strike’ 91

11 Speak for yourself, not the world—‘I’ language and assertiveness 93

12 Don’t masquerade your opinion as facts 107

13 Ask, don’t tell 111

14 Never say what you like (or don’t) without saying why you like it (or don’t) 117

15 Put yourself on the same wavelength 123

Part III Getting good information
Learning how things are from the other person’s point of view 137

16 Focus on the speaker 139

17 Listen, listen, listen 145

18 Draw out the full story 157

Appendix 3 Closed to open questions 161

19 Ask the right questions 163

Part IV Watch that body language!
Improving communication through body language 175

20 Basic principles of body language 177

21 Your own body language starts from the inside 179

Appendix 4 Self-talk as an indicator of self-esteem 185

22 First impressions count! 189

23 Manage your body language 193

24 Build rapport through body language 203

25 Other people’s body language: are you succeeding or missing the mark? 207
Part V Put it in writing
Writing for clarity and persuasion 213

26 Be concise 215
27 Make your writing persuasive and easy to understand 225

Further reading 237

Index 239