

CONTENTS

	Preface	iii
1.	Introduction	1
2.	The returnable and non-returnable packaging discussion in terms of eco-balances	6
	2.1. Preamble	6
	2.2. Criticism of the eco-balances method	7
	2.3. Price comparison: A consistent approach	12
3.	Waste and true cost	15
	3.1. Testing the empirical and logical basis of the ordinance on returnable drink containers (RTN ordinance)	15
	3.2. The market-oriented concept of waste illustrated by apple juice	26
	3.3. Eco-price and true cost	38
4.	Economic consequences of the planned ordinance on returnable drink containers (RTN ordinance)	46
	4.1. Some data on the fruit juice market	46
	4.2. Implementation of the RTN ordinance	69
	4.3. Fruit juice producers and the RTN ordinance	78
	4.3.1. The control problem	78
	4.3.2. The option of a cartel	81
5.	Politico-economic assessment of the RTN ordinance and market-conforming alternatives	87
	5.1. Politico-economic criticism and packaging taxes	87
	5.2. Market-conforming collection systems	92
6.	Summary	104
7.	References	113
8.	Appendices	116
	1. On the logic of a concept of waste in terms of eco-balances	116
	2. Implications of the concept of waste in the RTN ordinance	126
	3. A model of consumer behaviour	131
	4. Markup calculation and the problem of fixed costs	135
	5. Text of draft bills	138
9.	List of abbreviations and list of symbols	150