Contents

Foreword  BERNARD CRICK  xi
Publisher’s Note  xvii

I  Western History and Thought before Race

1  In the Beginning  »  3
   The Political Idea  10
   The Idea of Race  14

2  The Ancient World  »  17
   The Moral Science of Eunomics  20
   Plato: Eunomia versus Eugenia  30
   Aristotle: Eunomics and the Practice of Politics  43
   Conclusion: Meaning and Method  57

3  Transitions from Greece to Rome  »  61
   Greek Notions of Political Citizenship and the Practicalities of Roman Life  64
   The Authority of Sense Impression  72
   The Authority of Geography and Language  76
   The Authority of the Historical Record  80
   The Authority of Magic: Apuleius  83
   Conclusion: Challenges to the Political Way  85
4 Jews, Christians, Moors, and Barbarians  »  87
   The Rise of Faith  89
   Purity of Blood and Expulsion  100
   Conclusion: The Mark of Cain  125

5 Monsters and the Occult  »  127
   The Secret Texts  128
   The Spread of the Occult  137
   Conclusion: New Divisions  146

6 New Methods, New Worlds, and the Search for Origins  »  147
   The Old Political Order  149
   A New Historical Methodology  155
   Renaissance England and the Voyages of Discovery  161
   Nobility and Race, Logic and Reason  168
   Conclusion: The Idea of Race  182

II The Racialization of the West

7 The First Stage in the Development of an Idea of Race, 1684–1815  »  187
   Analytical Foundations and the Germans in the Woods  191
   The Emergence of Anthropology  202
   National Character  213
   Conclusion: From Populus to Volk  232

8 The Search for Historical and Biological Origins, 1815–1870  »  235
   Race and History  236
   Race and Natural History  255
   Conclusion: Race Is In, Politics Is Out  274

9 The Rise of the Race-State and the Invention of Antisemitism, 1870–1900  »  277
   The English Genius  278
The Franco-Prussian War: Scientific Explanations 287
The Franco-Prussian War and German History 294
The Synthesis of History and Philosophy 306
Antisemitism: A New Formative Force 315
Conclusion: From Race-State to Race War 323

10 Race is All, 1890–1939  325
The Roots of Nazism 326
Social Darwinism, Sociology, and Race Psychology 335
Race, Politics, and History 341
The Final Synthesis 348
Conclusion: The Final Solution 365

11 Reactions, Retractions, and New Orthodoxies, 1920 to the Present  369
The Counterhypotheses 370
The Orthodoxy of Modern Race Relations 376
Postwar Palliatives 385
Conclusion: Politics and Political Theory 396

Notes 403
Index 419