

Contents

List of Tables vii

List of Figures viii

List of Abbreviations ix

Preface x

Chapter One: The Disorganization of Organized Labour 1

Introduction: A New Era in Union History 1

Dimensions Of Disorganization 3

Union Decline in Britain 10

Geography and Unions 14

On Method, Measurement and Purpose 19

Chapter Two: Situating Trade Unionism: Spaces of Regulation and Representation 23

Introduction 23

Economic Geography and Labour 24

Institutional Spaces and Regulation 30

Spaces of Representation 33

Conclusions and Implications 39

Chapter Three: The Contours of Decline: Union Retreat and Resilience in the Regions 40

Introduction 40

The Early Geographical Development of the Union Movement 41

The Geographical 'Dispersal' of Post-war Trade Unionism 47

The Regional Impact of Contemporary Decline 51

The Heartlands Issue: The Experience of Individual Unions 61

Conclusion: Resilience Amidst Retreat 81

Chapter Four: Labour Market Restructuring and Regional Unionism 83

Introduction 83

Unions and the Changing Employment Structure 85

Regional Employment Recomposition Versus the Unions 91

New Regulatory Spaces: Undermining the Institutional Bases Of Regional Unionism 100

The New Industrial Relations: Labour Flexibility and the Growth of Non-unionism in the Regions 105

The Role of Regional Traditions 118

Chapter Five: Striking Out the Past?
Geographies of Industrial Action 121

Introduction 121
Discontinuities in Industrial Action 122
The Geography of British Strike Waves 126
Regions And Strikes: Geographies of Industrial Conflict 132
Communities of Collective Action 146
Micro-geographies of Strikes: The Militant or Quiescent Workplace 151
Conclusions 153

Chapter Six: Decentralization
And Local Industrial Politics 156

Introduction 156
Delimiting Decentralization 158
Trade Unions And Decentralization 162
The Anatomy of Decentralization Revisited: The Geography of Collective Bargaining 168
Decentralization in Engineering and the Union Response 171
The Role of Local Context: Engineering in the North West and South East Compared 177
Conclusions 188

Chapter Seven: Mapping Union Futures: Representation and Organization in a Detraditionalized Economy 190

Introduction 190
*Mapping Future Union Landscapes:
Three Scenarios* 192
The Detraditionalization of Industrial Relations? 195
Representation, Organizational Structure and Geography 203

Appendix 207
Bibliography 211
Subject Index 227
Names Index 239

Tables

1.1	Union density in OECD countries, 1970–1990	4
1.2	Strike activity rates in selected countries, 1973–1992	7
1.3	Collective bargaining coverage in selected countries, 1980–1990	8
1.4	Trade union membership and density in the United Kingdom, 1977–1994	11
3.1	Union Recognition by region, 1980–1990, manual workers, private sector	54
3.2	Union recognition by region, 1980–1990, non-manual workers, private sector	55
3.3	Union density by region, 1984–1990, manual workers, all sectors	57
3.4	Union density by region, 1984–1990, non-manual workers, all sectors	57
3.5	Union density by region, 1984–1990, full-time workers, all sectors	58
3.6	Union density by region, 1984–1990, part-time workers, all sectors	58
3.7	Union density in the regions, 1989–1994, all workers and sectors	59
3.8	Membership changes in selected unions, 1979–1990	62
3.9	‘Heartland’ regions of various unions, based on membership shares, 1979	68
3.10	Changes in membership in ‘heartlands’ and ‘peripheries’ of various unions, 1979–1990	69
3.11	‘Heartland’ regions of various unions, based on membership density 1981	71
4.1	The restructuring of employment in the United Kingdom: the shift from industry to services, 1979–1993	86
4.2	Employment change and union density, by industrial sector, Great Britain	88
4.3	Establishment size and union density	88
4.4	Union density and recognition, by employment group, Great Britain, 1989 and 1994	89
4.5	The shift towards female work, part-time jobs and the self-employed, Great Britain	89
4.6	Regional employment shifts and union decline	93
4.7	The changing economic structure of the regions, by broad sector, 1979–1994	94
4.8	The contribution of employment recomposition to the decline in regional unionization	96
4.9	Structural versus area effects in regional union recognition differentials, manual workers, private sector, 1980 and 1990	98
4.10	Structural versus area effects in regional union recognition differentials, non-manual workers, private sector, 1980 and 1990	99
4.11	‘New style’ industrial relations: two regions compared	111
4.12	Union recognition and age of establishment in the regions, by per cent of employees, 1990	116
4.13	Union recognition and age of establishment in the regions, by per cent of workplaces, 1990	116
4.14	New business registrations, by region, 1984–1990	118
5.1	Working days lost in industrial disputes, selected countries, 1982–1991	126

5.2	Regional strike 'proneness', 1911-1945	135
5.3	Average regional strike rates, 1966-1993	138
5.4	Structural versus area effects in regional strike rates, all workers and sectors, annual averages for 1966-1979 and 1980-1993	143
5.5	Regional strike rates in the early 1990s	145
6.1	The scope and structure of collective bargaining in the regions, 1978	167
6.2	The scope and structure of collective bargaining in the regions, 1985	167
6.3	The scope and structure of collective bargaining in the regions, manual workers, 1984 and 1990	169
6.4	The scope and structure of collective bargaining in the regions, non-manual employees, 1984 and 1990	170
6.5	The incidence of procedural industrial relations conferences in engineering companies belonging to the Engineering Employers' Federation	187
7.1	Management attitudes towards union organization in the workplace, unionized and non-unionized establishments, two regions compared	201
A1	Main sources of data used in this study	208

Figures

1.1	Union density trends in selected countries, 1970-1990	5
1.2	Trade union density in selected countries, 1990	6
1.3	Trade union membership and density in the United Kingdom, 1870-1993	11
3.1	Regional trade union densities, 1892	45
3.2	Regional trade union densities, 1975	52
3.3	Regional trade union densities, 1990	60
3.4	Regional densities for selected individual unions, 1981 and 1991	72-80
5.1	Strike trends in the UK, 1888-1993	123
5.2	The geography of strike activity in the late nineteenth century	129
5.3	Regional strike proneness, 1911-1945	134
5.4	The regional incidence of strike activity, 1966-1993	139-140
6.1	Employment in the UK engineering sector, 1966-1992	175
6.2	Membership of the AEU, 1851-1992	176
6.3	The geographical and organizational structure of the AEU	178
6.4	AEU districts surveyed: membership in 1992	180
6.5	AEU recognition and membership, 1992: establishments in the 'South East' and 'North West'	181
6.6	AEU recognition by size of establishment, 1992: engineering establishments in the 'South East' and 'North West'	181
6.7	Percentage change in AEU membership (Engineering section only), 1970-1979 and 1979-1992, selected districts	182
6.8	Percentage change in AEU membership (Engineering section only), 1970-1979 and 1979-1992 Executive Council divisions	183
6.9	Changes in EEF procedural industrial relation meetings in selected associations, 1981-1992	186