

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	9
Part A Proceedings of the experts meeting on profiling	11
I. The main policy thrust of profiling in the four countries under study	13
II. The accuracy of statistical models.....	15
III. The combination of formal profiling methods and staff judgement	18
IV. Salient features of the referral process.....	19
V. Design and implementation issues in the referral and delivery process of ALMPs	21
VI. Can profiling raise the cost-effectiveness of ALMPs?	22
VII. Summary of main findings	25
Part B National reports.....	29
I. The early identification of jobseekers who are at greatest risk of long-term unemployment in Australia	31
Introduction	31
Australia's early intervention strategy.....	32
History and rationale.....	32
Provisions and practices.....	33
Implementation issues.....	37
Evaluation research.....	38
Early identification.....	38
Changes to labour market assistance announced in the 1996-97 Commonwealth budget	44
Conclusions.....	47
Appendix A Development of the Jobseeker Screening Instrument (JSI)	51
Appendix B The Client Classification Level (CCL) tool	53
Appendix C Development of the Jobseeker Classification Instrument (JSCI)	55

II. Profiling the unemployed in Canada: access and referrals to active labour market programmes	63
Introduction	63
Long-term unemployment in Canada	64
Active labour market policies	65
Employment insurance	66
Current practices and provisions in profiling the unemployed	66
The case management framework	66
The counselling process	67
The nature of counselling services	67
Counsellor skills and training	68
Client characteristics and profiling	68
Evaluations	69
Referral to ALMPs	69
Summary	69
The Service and Outcome Measurement System (SOMS)	70
Origins	70
Description	70
Evaluation of SOMS to date	72
Ongoing evaluations and development	73
Conclusions	74
Appendix	77
Bibliography	80
III. Early identification/profiling in the United Kingdom	81
Introduction and summary	81
Features of the United Kingdom labour market	81
Dynamism in the United Kingdom's labour market	85
The United Kingdom's research into early identification	90
Consideration of the form of government interventions	91
Lessons from active labour market policies in the United Kingdom	94
Bibliography	97
IV. Worker profiling and reemployment services in the United States	99
Introduction	99
Dislocated workers and the need for reemployment services	100
The problem of worker dislocation	100
Reemploying dislocated workers: the role of UI	100
Research origins of WPRS: determining what works	101
Early intervention/profiling	101
Job-search assistance	102
Federal legislation, guidance and support	103
Federal legislation	103
Implementation process and implementation funding	104
WPRS reporting and evaluation	104

Implementation of the WPRS system.....	105
How the profiling mechanism works	105
Identification and referral	106
Reemployment services	108
Administrative issues	109
Conclusions.....	110
Appendix	115
Bibliography	118