Contents

1 Introduction 5

2 Some Theoretical Reflections: European Social Policy between National and Supranational Regulation 7

2.1 European Multilevel Governance 7

2.2 National Social Policy under Regime Competition and Legal Restrictions 8

2.3 Supranational Social Policy 9

2.4 European Social Policy between National and European Regulation, Market Freedom and Social Protection 11

3 The Empirical Case Study:Posted Workers in the Framework of Liberalized Services Provision 12

3.1 Posted Workers in the European Construction Industry 12

3.2 The Legal Status Quo: Liberalized Services Provision and Social Protection 14

3.3 Legal Bases for National and Supranational Regulation 15

3.4 The European Regulatory Effort: Supranational Political Entrepreneurship and the Logic of Intergovernmentalism 17

3.5 National Regulations as a Means of Overcoming European Deadlock 20

3.6 The European Directive: Protecting Divergent National Labor Law Regimes 26

4 Conclusion 29

4.1 The Regulatory Pattern in the Posted Workers Case 29

4.2 The Potential for Social Regulation in the Single European Market 30

4.3 Some Final Remarks 32

References 34