PART I. INFORMATION LITERACY INSTRUCTION BACKGROUND

Chapter 1. Information Literacy Instruction: What Is It?	3
A Rose By Any Other Name – Or Is It? What Is Information Literacy?	3
What's In a Name?	4
What Are Some Typical Definitions of IL?	5
How Do We Teach It?	6
A Working Definition of IL	8
Is IL a New Concept?	8
Mechanics versus Concepts	9
Final Remarks: IL, Relevance and Partnerships	10
Exercises	11
Read More About It	11
Chapter 2. History of Information Literacy Instruction	13
Libraries and Librarians: Where Do They Fit?	13
Roots of Instruction and Information Literacy in Libraries	14
Development of Modern Library Instruction Movements	16
Bibliographic Instruction	16
Relationship to Reference	18
On Beyond Farber and Dudley	19
Information Literacy	20

Information Competency and Information Fluency	21
History and Role of Library Instruction Organizations, Publications, and Other Support Groups	25
Regional Instruction Organizations	25
ALA ACRL Bibliographic Instruction Section (BIS)/ Instruction Section (IS) and ALA Library Instruction Roundtable (LIRT)	26
Library Orientation and Exchange (LOEX)	27
International Federation of Library Associations (IFLA)	27
BI-L	27
ACRL Institute for Information Literacy (IIL)	28

BUILDING BLOCKS

Chapter 3. A Brief Introduction to Learning Theory	33
Why Psychology?	33
What—How—Who?	34
Schools of Psychology	35
Behaviorism, or the Stimulus-Response Approach to Learning	35
Cognitive Psychology	41
Humanist Psychology	50
Final Remarks	55
Exercises	56
Read More About It	56
Chapter 4. An Overview of Learning Styles	59
Who Are Our Learners?	59
A Sampling of Styles	60
Cognitive Styles	61
Affective Styles	64
Physiological Styles	66
Attempts at Categorizing the Styles	67
The Wholistic/Analytic; Verbal/Imagery Dimensions	67
Experiential Learning Model	68
Thinking Styles	70
Special Considerations	72
Measurement Issues	72
Career Choice and Academic Achievement	74

Gender Issues	74
Ethnicity/Culture-Based Issues	75
The Adult Learner	77
So Many Styles—So Little Time	78
Matching Teaching and Learning Styles: Does It Matter?	79
Dealing With Learning Styles	80
Final Remarks	83
Exercises	84
Read More About It	87
Chapter 5. Library Anxiety, Mental Models, and Conceptual Frameworks	89
Library Anxiety: What and Why?	89
Relationship to Technophobia	91
What Can We Do To Alleviate Library Anxiety?	92
Mental Models and Conceptual Frameworks	94
Altering Mental Models	95
Using Analogies for Conceptual Frameworks	97
Components of Effective Analogical Reasoning	99
Examples of Analogies	100
Placement of Conceptual Frameworks	107
The Cumulative Effect on Learning	108
Final Remarks	108
Exercises	108
Read More About It	109
Chapter 6. Critical Thinking and Active Learning	111
Critical Thinking	111
What Should Librarians Teach?	112
The ILI Librarian's Job: To "Save the Time of the Reader"	114
Who Should Teach Critical Thinking?	115
Critical Thinking Basics	115
Active Learning	116
What and Why?	116
When and Where?	117
To What Degree Should We Incorporate Active Learning Exercises?	119
Turn Your Teaching Into Learner-Centered Active Learning	120
In-Person, Synchronous Active Learning	122
Asynchronous Active Learning	123
Collaborative Learning	124
Learning Communities	125
Collaborative Learning Backlash	126

Online Learning and the Web	126
Final Remarks	127
Exercises	127
Read More About It	128

PART III. PLANNING & DEVELOPING INFORMATION LITERACY INSTRUCTION

Chapter 7. ILI Program Planning	131
How Does Instruction Get Initiated?	131
The Preliminary Planning Process	132
Needs Assessment	132
Goals and Objectives	135
Taxonomies and Standards	143
Trimming the Fat in Your Presentations	146
Final Remarks	146
Exercises	147
Read More About It	148
Chapter 8. Selecting Modes of Instruction	149
At the Instructional Café	149
Which Form of Instruction for Which Situation?	150
Selecting From the Menu	153
Key Selection Factors	155
Audience/Learners (Type, Age Or Educational Level, Skill Levels, and Size)	155
Purpose	158
Budget and Cost	159
Staffing: Planning, Preparation, and Delivery	161
Time Constraints: Preparation and Development	162
Time Constraints: Learning and Timing	162
Facilities (Space, Equipment, and Software) for Development	163
Facilities for Delivery	163
Paper versus. Electronic/Electric	163
Putting It All Together	164
Final Remarks	167
Exercises	167
Read More About It	168
Chapter 9. The Instructional Menu	169
ILI Modes and Materials	169
The Web as a Delivery Medium	170
Wayfinding Modes	171

Standalone and Supplementary Aids	176
Usage Guides and Practice Materials	185
Other Individual and Group Interactive Modes	189
Final Remarks	208
Exercises	209
Read More About It	209
Chapter 10. Basic Copyright and Design Issues	211
General Concerns	211
Copyright, Fair Use, and Intellectual Property	212
Fair Use and the U.S. Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA)	212
Implications for ILI	213
Budget, Administrative, and Colleague Support	215
Administrative Approval	215
Software and Equipment for Design	215
Priorities	217
Categories Of Instructional Modes and Materials	219
General Design Principles	219
Audience	220
Instructional Needs (Purpose)	220
How Much Content to Include	221
Format	227
The Learner and User Input	228
Final Remarks	230
Exercises	230
Read More About It	231
Chapter 11. Designing Instructional Modes and Materials	233
Designing Print Materials	233
Structure	234
White Space, Graphics, and Layout	235
Typeface or Font	239
Color	240
Preparation Time Available	241
Designing Audio, Video, and Presentation Slide Shows	241
Audio	241
Video	242
Overhead Transparencies	243
Presentation Slide Shows	244
Computer-Based Instruction (CBI)	246
Computer-Assisted Instruction (CAI)	246
Websites and Pages	247

Web Page Design Principles	250
Web-Based Courses	254
Personalized Websites	257
Designing Mixed Offerings	259
Backup Plans and Process	260
Salvaging Outdated Handouts	261
Preparing for Non-Functioning Presentation Software	261
What To Do When the Web Server Is Down	261
Preparing for Unexpected Changes in Web Interface or Content	262
What To Do When the Network Connection Fails	262
Final Remarks	263
Exercises	263
Read More About It	264
Chapter 12. Assessing, Evaluating, and Revising ILI Programs	265
Why Assess?	265
The Assessment/Evaluation/Revision Cycle	267
Steps in the Assessment Process	268
Assessing ILI	269
Selecting a Methodology	271
Who Wants to Know?	271
What Type of Data Do You Need?	272
Practical Considerations	272
Assessment Parameters	273
Formative and Summative Assessment	274
Reliability, Validity, and Usability	274
Norm-Referenced versus Criterion-Referenced Assessment	275
Control versus Relevance	275
Quantitative versus Qualitative Methods	276
Types of Assessment Tools	279
Objective Tests	281
Open-Ended Questions/Essays	281
Questionnaires/Surveys/Rating Scales	282
Interviews	283
Performance Assessment	284
Product Assessment	285

Chapter 14. Designing ILI Programs for Diverse Populations	313
Reaching and Teaching Diverse Populations	313
Know Your Learners	313
Group versus Individual Characteristics	314
Socialization, Acculturation, and Culture Clash	315
Macro versus Microcultures	316
Characteristics and Variations	317
Context Factors	317
Social Interaction	319
Separate versus Connected Learning	320
Rewards and Punishments	321
Communication Styles	321
Immediacy Factors	322
Specific Group Issues	323
Adult Learners	323
Ethnicity and Learning Styles	324
Gender Issues	325
International Students	326
People with Disabilities	328
Socioeconomic Factors	329

Solutions	329
Final Remarks	333
Exercises	334
Read More About It	334
Chapter 15. Delivering ILI in Various Environments	337
IL as National Mandate	337
Libraries and National Goals	338
Goal One and the Public Library	338
Goal Three and the School Library	339
Goal Five and the Academic and Special Libraries	339
Unifying Themes	339
The Environments	340
What Are They?	340
What Do They Have in Common?	342
Special Characteristics and Considerations: Needs, Population, and Relation to Parent Organization	343
The Public Library	343
The School (K-12) Environment	348
The Academic Library	354
The Special Library	359
Final Remarks	361
Exercises	362
Read More About It	363
Public Libraries	363
School Libraries	363
Academic Libraries	363
Special Libraries	363
Chapter 16. Teaching Technology	365
The Nature of Technology	365
Technophobia and Empowering Users	366
What Kinds of Technology Should We Teach?	367
Tension: Teach What Is Available Through the Library or Teach What They Want to Know?	367
Assess the Technological Landscape and User Needs Competencies	368
A Baseline Learning Approach	370
On Beyond the Baseline	370
Systematic Approaches to Designing Instruction in Technology Use	371
The Barclay Approach	371
A New Ten-Step Model	372

IL Librarians and Computer Trainers	385
Final Remarks	385
Exercises	386
Read More About It	386
Chapter 17. Using Technology to Teach	387
Give Us This Day Our Daily Technology?	387
Questions About Technology Use in Instruction	388
What Is It?	388
What Good Is It?	389
Advantages and Disadvantages of Technology Use in Instruction	390
Learning and Trying Out Technology for Instruction	393
Electronic Classrooms	396
Putting It All Together	398
Distance Learning	399
Library Involvement in Distance Learning	401
Principles for Success	402
Techniques	404
Using Technology to Prepare for Both Low-Tech and High-Tech Environments	406
How Much Technology Is Too Much?	407
Synchronicity and Asynchronicity, Redux	407
The Crux of Learning and Teaching	408
Final Remarks	409
Exercises	410
Read More About It	410

PART V. THE FUTURE OF ILI

Chapter 18. Visions of the Future: Two Perspectives	413
Esther S. Grassian's Perspective	413
Joan R. Kaplowitz's Perspective	416
