Contents

List of appendices, boxes, figures and tables
Preface
List of abbreviations
1 Situating preferences in context
2 The changing nature of European foreign economic policy
3 The 'basic' telecommunications services negotiations: a successful three-level game
4 The EU and the MAI: an unsuccessful hybrid game
5 Transatlantic aviation: competing two-level games
6 Conclusion: cooperation in a flexible framework
References
Annexes
Index
Appendices, boxes, figures and tables

Appendices

3.1 European public voice telecommunications in 1994 page 80–1
3.2 Key dates in the interaction between the development of the EU's internal regime and the GATS negotiations 82–4
5.1 Key developments in European external aviation relations 140–3

Boxes

2.1 Negotiating and ratification procedures under the common commercial policy 24
2.2 The scope of the common commercial policy pre-Amsterdam (Article 113) 25
2.3 Amendments to the scope of the common commercial policy prior to Nice 31
3.1 Modes of supplying services 62
3.2 The distinction between 'basic' telecommunications and 'value added' services 62
4.1 EU policies affecting MNEs 93
4.2 Main new elements of the MAI agenda 97
4.3 US extraterritorial legislation 98–9
5.1 'Air freedom' rights 111

Figures

1.1 Depiction of a two-level game 3
1.2 Depiction of a three-level game 4
2.1 World exports (in 1995 US$) 28
2.2 The value of EU external economic relations in 1999 28
2.3 Domains of European foreign economic policy in the mid-1990s 36
4.1 FDI outflows as a percentage of GDP, 1995–97  89
4.2 Summary of member government considerations  89
5.1 Influences on governments’ preferences regarding intra-EU cooperation  118
6.1 Options for participation in international negotiations  153
6.2 Depiction of European participation in international negotiations  156
6.3 The spectrum of cooperation  162

Tables
1.1 Economic interests and intended commitments at the time of cooperative decisions  10
1.2 Impact of the acquis on cooperation  16
2.1 The changing international trade agenda  29
2.2 ECJ judgments extending the scope of the common commercial policy  33
2.3 ECJ judgments developing the ‘doctrine of implied powers’  34
3.1 Share of public ownership in incumbent operators  54
3.2 EU telecommunications liberalisation measures  58
3.3 The EU’s and its member states’ changing market access exceptions (Mode 3 commercial presence)  68–9
3.4 Member governments’ initial negotiating positions  70
3.5 Deadlines for implementing EU directives and WTO commitments  75
4.1 National exceptions to the NTI (1997)  88
5.1 Relative importance of North Atlantic routes to European ‘flag carriers’  113
5.2 US-member state markets, 1996  114
5.3 Major alliances between EU and US airlines  116
5.4 European states with ‘open skies’ agreements with the US  119
5.5 Comparison of international aviation regimes  122