

Contents

Preface	ix
Part I: United States, Russia, and China: Building Cooperative Approaches	1
Introduction	3
Sharyl Cross and Paul J. Bolt
1. Chinese, American, and Russian Security Policies: The Response to Terrorism	8
Paul J. Bolt, Su Changhe, Robin L. Bowman, and David H. Sacko
Part II: Transnational Security Issues and Challenges	31
2. Nuclear Weapons in a Changing Threat Environment	33
Pavel Podvig, Fred Webling, and Jing-dong Yuan
3. Toward Building Cooperation in Energy Security	51
Dianne Barton, Mikhail V. Margelov, and Sharyl Cross
4. China's Growing Ecological Footprint: Global Threat or Opportunity for Collaboration?	70
Elizabeth C. Economy, Jennifer L. Turner, and Fengshi Wu
5. Perspectives from the United States, Russia, and China on Countering Ideological Support for Terrorism	89
Graeme P. Herd, Rouben Azizian, and Yu Yixuan
6. Responses to Border/Internal Security Threats: "The Terror of Disease and the Disease of Terror"	104
Liu Jianjun and Deron R. Jackson

Part III: Regional Security Issues and Challenges	121
7. Europe–Russia–United States: Whither Are We Drifting? Dmitri Katsy, David H. Sacko, and Konstantin Khudoley	123
8. Central Asian States and Policy Triangles: China, Russia, and the United States Gregory Gleason and Zhang Jiadong	139
9. Contemporary Security Challenges in the Middle East John J. Le Beau, American Perspective Mikhail Troitskiy, Russian Perspective	158
10. Managing Nuclear Proliferation: Chinese and American Approaches to North Korea Wei Zongyou and William E. Berry Jr.	176
Index	197
About the Editors and Contributors	207