Bruno Paul
The Life and Work of a Pragmatic Modernist

Edition Axel Menges
Contents

6 Acknowledgements

7 Introduction

9 1. The making of a pragmatic Modernist: 1874–1896
Seifhennersdorf 9 – Dresden 11 – Munich 12

16 2. Turn of the century in Munich and the culture of youth: 1896–1906
Bruno Paul as illustrator 16 – Simplicissimus 17 – Simplicissimus and liberal politics 20 – Modern graphic art and modern life 21 – Bruno Paul and the applied arts 24 – The artist as architect 28 – A new direction 29

30 3. The reconquest of a harmonious culture: 1906–1912
Paul’s appointment to the Berlin school of applied arts 30 – The first architectural works of Paul’s Berlin practice 32 – Paul and the Werkbund 37 – Typenmöbel 38 – Reforming the artifacts of daily life 40 – Interiors for Norddeutscher Lloyd 42 – The touring exhibition »German Applied Arts« 44 – Paul’s residence in Berlin 45

46 4. War and revolution: 1912–1920
Educational reform 46 – Furniture and interiors 1912–1914 48 – Architectural practice on the eve of the World War 52 – Bruno Paul and the 1914 Werkbund debate 52 – The war years 55 – Revolution 58 – Reform and the culture of revolution 60

61 5. Consolidation and renewal in the Weimar Republic: 1920–1925
Architectural Expressionism 61 – Furniture and interiors 64 – Expressionism and the middle class 65 – Seifhennersdorf 67 – The Vereinigte Staatsschulen für freie und angewandte Kunst 69 – Paul versus the Bauhaus 70 – Renouncing Expressionism 72

73 6. Pragmatic Functionalism and the timeless German building arts: 1925–1932
The Plattenhaus H 1018 73 – The architecture of modern commerce 74 – The modern home 76 – Villa Traub and the architecture of modern life 77 – Vereinigte Staatsschulen für freie und angewandte Kunst 82 – The New World 83 – Pragmatic Functionalism 85

86 7. An anonymous coexistence: 1932–1945 Condemnation 86 – Paul and the aesthetics of the »Drittes Reich« 88 – A personal complication 89 – Farewell to the Vereinigte Werkstätten 89 – »An anonymous coexistence« 91

Starting over 93 – Returning to Berlin 96 – Ending a career 97

99 Conclusion

101 Catalog

111 Bibliography

114 Notes

126 Index

128 Illustration credits