British Science Fiction Cinema

Edited by I.Q. Hunter

London and New York
Contents

List of illustrations vii
Notes on contributors ix
Acknowledgements xi

Introduction: the strange world of the British science fiction film 1
I.Q. HUNTER

1 Things to Come and science fiction in the 1930s 16
JEFFREY RICHARDS

2 ‘We’re the Martians now’: British sf invasion fantasies of the 1950s and 1960s 33
PETER HUTCHINGS

3 Apocalypse then!: the ultimate monstrosity and strange things on the coast...an interview with Nigel Kneale 48
PAUL WELLS

4 Alien women: the politics of sexual difference in British sf pulp cinema 57
STEVE CHIBNALL

5 ‘A stiff upper lip and a trembling lower one’: John Wyndham on screen 75
ANDY SAWYER
Contents

6 Trashing London: the British colossal creature film and fantasies of mass destruction 88
   IAN CONRICH

7 The Day the Earth Caught Fire 99
   I.Q. HUNTER

8 Adapting telefantasy: the Doctor Who and the Daleks films 113
   JOHN R. COOK

9 'A bit of the old ultra-violence': A Clockwork Orange 128
   JAMES CHAPMAN

10 The British post-Alien intrusion film 138
   PETER WRIGHT

11 Dream girls and mechanic panic: dystopia and its others in Brazil and Nineteen Eighty-Four 153
   LINDA RUTH WILLIAMS

12 'No flesh shall be spared': Richard Stanley's Hardware 169
   SUE SHORT

Filmography 181
Index 209