Contents

Acknowledgements
vii
List of illustrations
viii

Prologue: The history of gothic fiction
On the pleasure derived from objects of terror
Gothic and history
1

1. History and the gothic novel
  I. What's gothic about the gothic novel?
    Questions of form: the novel and the romance
    Questions of history: Goths and the age of enlightenment
    Reading history and the gothic constitution
  17
  II. Reading gothic histories: Walpole's The Castle of Otranto
    Patriotism, Wilkes and the gothic
    27

2. Female gothic and the secret terrors of sensibility
  I. Radcliffe and the politics of female sensibility
    Radcliffe and gothic masculinity: banditti and tyrants
  51
  II. Radcliffe and the politics of masculine sensibility
    The 'supernatural explained' and the politics of gothic form
  62
  III. Gothic radicals: Wollstonecraft's The Wrongs of Woman
    70

3. Revolution and libertinism in the gothic novel
  I. Compositional politics of The Monk
    Libertine writing and the revolutionary enlightenment
  83
  II. Lewis and the French Revolutionary Wars
    Lewis and the Terror
  96
  III. Publication and the politics of censorship
    The Monk: criticism and censorship
  106

4. Science, conspiracy and the gothic enlightenment

I. Charles Brockden Brown: conspiracy, enlightenment and the supernatural explained

A 'single family' and 'the condition of a nation'

Superstition and madness, reason and wonder

Gothic revolutionaries and the secret enlightenment

Conspiracy and enlightenment in Carwin's 'memoirs'

II. Fictions of science in Mary Shelley's Frankenstein

Alchemy and modern science

Secrecy and subversion

5. Vampires, credulity and reason

I. The 1730s vampire controversy

Walpole, the new commercial society and the excise vampire

Antiquarian vampires and the birth of folklore

II. Romance vampires and the romantic poets

Byron's The Giaour (1813): the vampire as modern tyrant

John William Polidori, The Vampyre and Byron

Vampires and the science of folklore

III. History, the vampire and Dracula

Modernity and atavism in the vampire

6. Zombies and the occultation of slavery

Answering the question 'What is a zombie?'

I. Slavery and the zombie

Rebel slaves and the devil-king Zombi

Lafcadio Hearn's zombie stories: history as spectre

II. Twentieth-century gothic and the zombies of modernity

Modern slavery in Seabrook's The Magic Island

Gothic hybrids and the white zombies

III. The occultation of miscegenation and slavery in the zombie film

Select bibliography of gothic resources

Index