

Issues and Methods in Comparative Politics: An Introduction

■ 2nd Edition

Todd Landman

Contents

LIST OF FIGURES	ix
LIST OF TABLES	xi
LIST OF BRIEFING BOXES	xiii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	xv
INTRODUCTION	xvii

PART I WHY, HOW, AND PROBLEMS OF COMPARISON 1

1 Why compare countries?	3
Reasons for comparison	4
Contextual description	5
Classification	5
Hypothesis-testing	6
Prediction	10
The science in political science	10
Scientific terms and concepts	15
Theory and method	15
Ontology, epistemology, and methodology	16
Cases, units of analysis, variables, and observations	17
Levels of analysis	18
Quantitative and qualitative methods	19
Summary	20
Further reading	20

2	How to compare countries	23
	Introduction	24
	Methods of comparison	24
	Comparing many countries	26
	Comparing few countries	29
	Single-country studies as comparison	34
	Conclusion	35
	Further reading	36
3	Choosing countries and problems of comparison	39
	Too many variables and too few countries	40
	Establishing equivalence	43
	Selection bias	46
	Spuriousness	51
	Ecological and individualist fallacies	53
	Value bias	55
	Conclusion	56
	Further reading	58
PART II	COMPARING COMPARISONS	61
4	Economic development and democracy	65
	The research problem	66
	Comparing many countries	70
	Comparing few countries	75
	Comparing few countries quantitatively	75
	Comparing few countries qualitatively	77
	Single-country studies	87
	Summary	90
	Further reading	93
5	Violent political dissent and social revolution	95
	The research problem	96
	Comparing many countries	97
	Comparing few countries	108
	Single-country studies	117
	Summary	120
	Further reading	122

6 Non-violent political dissent and social movements	123
The research problem	124
Comparing many countries	125
Comparing few countries	130
Single-country studies	138
Summary	145
Further reading	145
7 Transitions to democracy	147
The research problem	148
Comparing many countries	149
Comparing few countries	155
Single-country studies	166
Summary	174
Further reading	176
8 Institutional design and democratic performance	179
The research problem	180
Comparing many countries	184
Comparing few countries	190
Single-country studies	195
Summary	198
Further reading	200
9 Human rights	201
The research problem	204
Comparing many countries	206
Comparing few countries	208
Transnational advocacy	209
Truth and reconciliation	214
Single-country studies	215
Summary	218
Further reading	221

PART III COMPARATIVE METHODS AND NEW ISSUES	223
10 Common themes and different comparisons	225
Methodological trade-offs	227
Comparing many countries	227
Comparing few countries	228
Single-country studies	231
Building theory	232
Conclusion: drawing the lessons	238
Further reading	239
11 New challenges for comparative politics	241
Full circle	242
New methods	244
New issues	247
Transnational political influence	248
Political diffusion	249
Globalization	250
Maintaining relevance	251
Conclusion	254
Further reading	254
GLOSSARY	257
REFERENCES	265
INDEX	285