Agents of Peace

Public Communication and Conflict Resolution in an Asian Setting

Edited by

Thomas Hanitzsch, Martin Löffelholz and Ronny Mustamu
Table of Content

Forward........................................................................................................3

Thomas Hanitzsch and Martin Löffelholz
Introduction..................................................................................................7

Martin Löffelholz
Communication as a Key Resource of Warfare.................................13
Structural Changes in Security Politics, Communication Management and War Coverage at the Beginning of the 21st Century

Thomas Dominikowski
Mass Media and Mass War.................................................................37
Historical Approaches to a Turbulent Symbiosis

Stephen J. A. Ward
Objective Public Journalism for Global Media..........................73

Jake Lynch and Annabel McGoldrick
Reporting Conflict.................................................................107
An Introduction to Peace Journalism
Bunn Srina Nagara
The Role of Journalists in Strengthening Peace.............149

Thomas Hanitzsch
The Peace Journalism Problem.....................................185
Failure of News People – or Failure on Analysis?