Contents

List of contributors vii

1. Economics and the social sciences: synergies and trade-offs
   Stavros Ioannides and Klaus Nielsen 1

PART I ECONOMICS AND OTHER SOCIAL SCIENCES: RELATIONSHIPS AND BOUNDARIES

2. What can be learnt from ‘serious’ biology and psychology?
   Jack Vromen 31

3. Economics and sociology in the transition from industrial to post-industrial capitalism
   George Liagouras 63

4. The ‘institutional turn’ in the social sciences: a review of approaches and a future research agenda
   Klaus Nielsen 91

5. The problem of historical specificity
   Geoffrey M. Hodgson 112

PART II NEW LIGHT ON RATIONALITY, SOCIAL RELATIONS AND THE ENVIRONMENT

6. The irrationality of utility maximization or the Death of a Salesman
   Irene van Staveren 141

7. Social capital or sociality? Methodological contrasts between economics and other social sciences
   Desmond McNeill 163

8. Where disciplinary boundaries blur: the environmental dimension of institutional economics
   Eyüp Özveren 185
PART III  FLEXIBILITY, ROUTINES AND PRODUCTION
IN ECONOMICS AND SOCIAL SCIENCES

9. Economic flexibility: a structural analysis
   William A. Jackson 215

10. Routines: a brief history of the concept
    Markus C. Becker 233

11. Complementarity, cognition and capabilities:
    towards an evolutionary theory of production
    Guido Buenstorf 262

Index 289