The Changing International Law of High Seas Fisheries

Francisco Orrego Vicuña
Contents

Table of cases

Table of statutes, national legislation, and related documents

Table of treaties

Introduction

1 The evolving principles and concepts of international law in high seas fishing
   Freedom of fishing in the high seas in a historical setting
   The evolving legal concepts relating to high seas fishing
   The freedom of fishing in the high seas in customary international law
   Fishing and conservation in the high seas under the 1958 Geneva conventions
   The changing role of international law on high seas fisheries

   The emerging principles relating to conservation and management of living resources within the exclusive economic zone
   The species approach and the linkage with high seas issues
   Salmon fisheries and the prevailing interest of the state of origin
   Marine mammals: furthering the restrictions to the freedom of exploitation
   The Convention's limited approach to the straddling stocks and highly migratory species question

vii
Conservation and management of the living resources of the high seas under the Convention 45
Environmental achievements of the Convention 48
New perspectives in the development of international law 50

3 Developing the international law options for high seas fisheries conservation and management 53
The growing pressure on high seas fisheries 53
The global reach of high seas fisheries overexploitation 55
Implications of the state of high seas fisheries for conservation and management regimes 60
The Convention in a static view: protecting the interests of distant-water fishing nations 62
The Convention in an evolutionary interpretation: advancing the interests of coastal states 65
Interpreting the Convention in a spirit of mutual accommodation 68
The search for new criteria in the light of environmental concerns 76

4 Trends in contemporary international law and national legislation and practice on high seas fisheries issues 79
Trends relating to the conservation and management of transboundary stocks 80
The leading role of salmon fisheries arrangements 84
Marine mammals and the increasing emphasis on conservation 86
Straddling stocks and the development of the role of coastal states 89
Highly migratory species and the harmonization of coastal states' rights with international cooperation 96
Other aspects of contemporary international practice relevant to high seas fisheries 101
Chile's presential sea approach: a restricted model of coastal state intervention 107
Argentina's jurisdictional claim: advancing coastal states' interests 111
Canada's high seas jurisdictional claims: new implications for international law 112
Advancing international law: a conclusion on contemporary practice 117
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Pages</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>The United Nations Conference on Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The preparatory work of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The UNCED deliberations and the convening of the United Nations Conference on Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks</td>
<td>126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Organization of the conference and the issue of the form of its outcome</td>
<td>131</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Interpretations and problems relating to the definitions of the 1995 Agreement</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>General international law provisions and final clauses</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Conservation and management of fisheries in the high seas in the context of the evolving principles of international environmental law</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The principle of sustainable development and the conservation of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The principle of preventive action in the context of the general principles of conservation and management of high seas fisheries</td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The emergence of the precautionary principle and the question of its application to high seas fisheries management</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Developing the precautionary approach in high seas fisheries</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The principle of informed decision-making in the context of high seas fisheries</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Ecosystem management and the legal interactions between areas under national jurisdiction and the high seas</td>
<td>171</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The legal relationship between the 1995 Agreement and the Convention</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Geographical ambit of application of the 1995 Agreement</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The issue of compatibility of conservation and management measures in the high seas and in areas under national jurisdiction</td>
<td>183</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Nature and extent of the duty to cooperate in establishing compatible measures</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ecosystem management as applied to enclosed and semi-enclosed seas and other areas of the high seas</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CONTENTS

8 Perfecting international cooperation through organizations and arrangements for high seas fisheries conservation and management 200

Extent of the duty to undertake international cooperation 200
Questions of participation in cooperation mechanisms and the right to fish in the high seas 206
Establishing fisheries organizations and arrangements 215
The principle of common but differentiated responsibility 222

9 Compliance and enforcement in high seas fisheries 227

The contribution of the FAO Agreement on Compliance and the Code on Responsible Fisheries 228
Strengthening the duties and rights of flag states under the 1995 Agreement 233
Advancing international cooperation and nonflag-state enforcement in high seas fisheries 240
Specific issues relating to boarding and inspection 245
Specific issues relating to investigation and prosecution 252
Port-state enforcement and the issue of access of fishing vessels to foreign ports 259

10 Perfecting the regime of high seas fisheries through effective dispute settlement 267

General obligations on dispute settlement 267
Early options for dispute settlement: regional procedures, arbitration, and application of the Convention 269
Disputes of a technical nature 272
Extending and adapting the application of dispute settlement procedures under the Convention 273
Dispute settlement in the context of provisional measures 279
Safeguarding a coastal state's sovereign rights and jurisdiction 282

Conclusion: Preserving the freedom of high seas fishing and ensuring conservation 288

Bibliography 294
Index 330