The Dilemma of Toxic Substance Regulation
How Overregulation Causes Underregulation at OSHA

John M. Mendeloff
Contents

Series Foreword by Richard Schmalensee ix
Acknowledgments xi
Introduction xiii

1 Overregulation, Underregulation, and the Rule-Making Dilemma 1

I THE NORMATIVE ISSUES

2 Are we Overregulating? How Should We Value Preventing a Death? 21

3 Are We Overregulating? What Are the Costs and Health Effects? 53

4 Are We Underregulating? 73

II THE POLITICS OF RULE MAKING

5 Explaining the Slow Pace of Standard Setting 105

6 Explaining What Is Regulated: The Issue of Priority Setting 141

7 Explaining Why Standards Are Strict 155
III
DIRECTIONS FOR REFORM

8
Generic Reform of Regulatory Procedures 189

9
Reform Strategies That Do Not Rely on Rule Making 209

10
New Strategies for Reforming Rule Making 231

Appendix A Variable Definitions in Regression 247
Appendix B Retrospective Studies of the Costs of Standards 248
Appendix C The Political Debate about Risk Assessment 251
Appendix D The Debate over the Size of the Workplace Cancer Problem 255
Appendix E Sources of Information for Table 4.8 258
Appendix F The Mechanisms by Which Strictness Leads to Slowness 261
Appendix G Dates of Completed OSHA Rules for Health Standards 268
Appendix H Court Cases Involving OSHA Health Standards 272

Notes 277
Index 315