Contents

List of contributors ix

1 Introduction 1
Stewart Field and Caroline Pelser

Part I
The new intelligence gathering: covert and proactive policing

2 The criminal informant: police management, supervision and control 31
Steven Greer and Nigel South

3 Police surveillance and its regulation in England and Wales 47
Timothy John and Mike Maguire

4 The legal framework of covert and proactive policing in France 67
Stewart Field

5 Proactive policing in France 83
Claude Journès

6 Special police methods of investigation: new legislation in the Netherlands 95
Theo de Roos

7 Proactive investigation: a Belgian perspective 111
Cyrille Fijnaut and Frank Verbruggen

8 Intelligence services and undercover operations: the case of Euromac 143
Nikos Passas and Jack A. Blum
Contents

Part II
The new information gathering: some new sources

9 Sun Tzu goes electronic. The changing nature of proactive methods in (criminal) intelligence
   Bob Hoogenboom
   163

10 Data bases – positive policing or civil liberties nightmare?
    Fiona Donson
    181

11 Financial investigation and privacy in Britain and the Netherlands
    Roan Lamp, Michael Levi and Wanda Kerver-Poldervaart
    197

12 Police intelligence gathering and access to journalists’ materials
    Chrisje Brants
    221

13 Journalists and the protection of sources of information in the Netherlands
    Chrisje Brants
    225

14 Journalistic material in the UK criminal process
    Ruth Costigan
    239

15 The privilege against self-incrimination in proactive policing
    Peter Alldridge and Bert Swart
    253

Part III
Accountability and control: some potential strategies

16 Controlling cross border undercover operations
   Jack A. Blum and Nikos Passas
   275

17 Proactive policing: limiting the role of the defence lawyer
   Ed Cape and Taru Spronken
   291

18 Judicial regulation of covert and proactive policing in the Netherlands and England and Wales
   Stewart Field and Nico Jörg
   323

19 Proactive policing and the principles of immediacy and orality
   John R. Spencer
   353

20 Invading the private? Towards conclusions
   Stewart Field
   371