THE LAW OF THE SEA
An Historical Analysis of the 1982 Treaty and Its Rejection by the United States by
James B. Morell

McFarland & Company, Inc., Publishers
Jefferson, North Carolina, and London
Contents

Acknowledgments vii
Abbreviations xi
Introduction xiii

1. Historical Development of the Law of the Sea 1
   Evolution of the Customary Legal Regime 1
   UNCLOS I and II 6
   The Exploitability Clause 11
   The Movement Toward Internationalization 14

2. Preparations for UNCLOS III 22
   The Ad Hoc Committee 22
   The Seabed Committee (1969–73) 27
   Economic and Technological Developments 40
   U.S. Policy 42
   The Group of 77 47

   First Session: 1973 (New York) 51
   Second Session: 1974 (Caracas) 52
   Third Session: 1975 (Geneva) 55
   Fourth Session: 1976 (New York) 59
   Fifth Session: 1976 (New York) 62
   Sixth Session: 1977 (New York) 65
   Seventh Session: 1978 (Geneva and New York) 68
   Eighth Session: 1979 (Geneva and New York) 72
   Ninth Session: 1980 (New York and Geneva) 74
   Tenth Session: 1981 (New York and Geneva) 78
   Eleventh Session: 1982 (New York) 80
   The Preparatory Commission 83
   Post-Conference Diplomacy 91
4. The U.S. Objections Examined
   Technology Transfer
   Revenue Sharing
   Production Controls
   Supranationality
   Decisionmaking Procedures
   Assured Access
   Competitive Balance
   Precedent

5. The Legal Status of Deep Seabed Resources
   The U.S. Position
   Adequacy of the Alternative Regime
   Legal Effect of the Declaration of Principles
   The Convention as Binding International Law
   Customary Law Outside the Convention
   The United States as Persistent Objector
   Grotius Reconsidered
   The Theoretical Case for a Res Communis Regime
   The Historical Case for a Res Communis Regime
   Res Communis as a Peremptory Norm

6. U.S. Interests in the Balance
   Marine Resources
   Navigation
   Scientific Research
   Environmental Protection
   World Order

Conclusions
Notes
Bibliography
Index