Export Controls in Transition

Perspectives, Problems, and Prospects

edited by Gary K. Bertsch and Steven Elliott-Gower

The Center for East-West Trade Policy, University of Georgia

Duke University Press

Durham and London  1992
Contents

Introduction Gary K. Bertsch and Steven Elliott-Gower 1

Part I Perspectives

1 The Security Perspective on Export Control Policy in the 1990s Sumner Benson 9
2 The Commercial Perspective Paul Freedenberg 37
3 Export Control Policy in the 1990s: The Diplomatic Perspective Martin J. Hillenbrand 59
4 European Perspectives Hanns-Dieter Jacobsen 73
5 NIC Perspectives Han S. Park 88

Part II Problems and Prospects in the 1990s

6 Defining Strategic Exports in the 1990s: From Export Control to the Management of Technology Exchange William J. Long 105
7 Enforcing Export Controls: Improving the Effectiveness of U.S. and Multilateral Export Controls Jere W. Morehead 128
8 The Problem of Extraterritoriality in U.S. Export Control Policy Dorinda G. Dallmeyer 148
9 U.S.-Soviet Joint Ventures and Export Control Policy Christine Westbrook and Alan B. Sherr 169
10 Soviet-Western Energy Trade: From Trade Controls to Energy Interdependence? Bruce W. Jentleson and Janne Haaland Matlary 203
11 The Future of COCOM Richard T. Cupitt 232
12 Changing Export Controls in an Interdependent World: Lessons from the Toshiba Case for the 1990s Beverly Crawford 249
14 Conclusion: Export Controls in a Changing Strategic Context Henry R. Nau 317

A Select Bibliography on Export Controls Prepared by John K. Koontz 337
Contributors 343
Index 347