The Regime of Straits in International Law

BING BING JIA

CLARENDON PRESS • OXFORD
1998
Contents

List of Abbreviations
Table of Treaties
Table of Cases
Table of Relevant Proposals Submitted at UNCLOS III
Table of Legislation
Table of Declarations, Resolutions, and Reports of the Secretary-General

Chapter 1
Introduction

Chapter 2
The Geographical Criterion

1. Geographical Straits
   1.1 The Geographical Definition
   1.2 The Legal Concept

2. The Geographical Criterion of International Straits:
   (I) Narrowness
   2.1 Baselines of the Territorial Sea
   2.2 Straits Enclosed by Straight Baselines are not Necessarily Precluded from becoming International Straits
   2.3 Overlap of Territorial Waters in Straits or in their Navigable Channels
   2.4 The Median Line
   2.5 Thalweg
      2.5.1 Portland Canal
      2.5.2 The Beagle Channel
   2.6 Some Wide Straits may Satisfy the Narrowsness Test

3. The Geographical Criterion of International Straits:
   (II) Connection of Separate Areas of the Sea
   3.1 Straits between Internal Waters and the High Seas
      3.1.1 The Case of the Strait of Juan De Fuca and Straits Beyond
      3.1.2 The Beagle Channel
      3.1.3 The Indreleia Channels
      3.1.4 The Kii Channel
Contents

3.2 Straits between the Territorial Sea and the High Seas 20
3.2.1 The Strait of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba 20
3.2.2 The Characteristic of this Type of Straits 22
3.2.3 Straits Leading to Enclosed or Semi-enclosed Seas 23
3.3 Straits Between Parts of the High Seas 23
3.3.1 The Finding of the International Court of Justice 24
3.3.2 The Test of Essentiality and the Existence of Alternative Routes 24
4. Navigational Aids and the Geographical Criterion 28
5. The General Acceptance by Governments of the Geographical Criterion Pronounced in the Corfu Channel Case 32

Chapter 3
Straits Used for International Navigation

1. Introduction 34
2. The Essentiality of Straits for Maritime Commerce as a Decisive Criterion in Determining International Straits 34
3. 'Used for International Navigation' as a Criterion for the Determination of International Straits 36
3.1 Prior to the Corfu Channel Case 36
3.2 The Corfu Channel Case: Arguments of the Parties 37
3.3 The Same: The Judgment 39
3.4 The Dissenting Opinion of Judge Azevedo 39
3.5 Utility Without Classification Satisfied the Court as a Criterion 40
3.6 Passage For Cabotage is not International Navigation 41
3.7 Regional Navigation as Evidence of the Use of Straits for International Navigation 42
3.8 Ports in Straits can only Attract more Traffic 43
3.9 The Variety of Flags and the Regularity of Navigation as the Main Indicators of the International Use of Straits 44
3.10 Types of Vessel 45
3.10.1 Regular Passage of Warships as Weighty Evidence 46
3.10.2 Ships other than Warships 46
4.1 The Anglo-Norwegian Fisheries Case: Positions of the Parties on this Point 48
4.2 Navigational Aids and the Potential Use of Straits for Navigation 49
Chapter 4
The Relationship Between International Straits and Bays

1. Introduction 59

2. Bays 60
   2.1 The Geographical Situation 60
   2.2 Conditions for the Appropriation of Bays 61
   2.3 The Closing Line of Bays as the Baseline of Territorial Waters 62
   2.4 Inter Fauces Terrae: The Basis for Appropriation of all Adjacent Waters 63

3. Formations Which can be Regarded as either Straits or Bays 65
   3.1 Introduction 65
   3.2 The Solent and Spithead 65
   3.3 The Straits between Vancouver Island and its Mainland 67
      3.3.1 The Boundary Straits 67
      3.3.2 The Waters North of Haro Strait as Bays? 67
   3.4 Long Island Sound 68
   3.5 Mississippi Sound 69
   3.6 The Strait of Magellan 69
   3.7 Santa Barbara Channel 71
   3.8. The Indreleia Channels 72

4. Bays, Straits, and Historic Waters 73
   4.1 Historic Bays 73
   4.2 Historic Bays and Historic Straits 74

5. Conclusions 76

Chapter 5
The Regime of Passage for International Straits prior to UNCLOS III

1. Introduction 78

2. The Regime of Innocent Passage prior to UNCLOS III 79
   2.1 The Meaning of the Word ‘Passage’ 79
   2.2 The Ambit of Innocence 80
2.3 The Right of Innocent Passage: Doctrine and State Practice 82
2.4 The Passage of Foreign Warships in the Territorial Sea 84
  2.4.1 Customary Law Before 1949 84
  2.4.2 Preconditions for Passage 86
  2.4.3 Differences of Opinion in the Literature before 1973 88
2.5 Innocence and Compliance with Local Laws and Regulations 89

3. The Customary Law for Passage through International Straits before 1949 90
  3.1 Early Rules for Passage through Straits 90
  3.2 The 1930 Hague Conference did not Find for Straits a Regime other than that for the Territorial Sea 92
  3.3 Appraisal of Dr Bruel's Opinion about the State of General Law before 1939 93

4. Customary Law Declared by the International Court 95
  4.1 The Different Positions of the Parties 95
  4.2 The Judgment 96
  4.3 Opinions of Individual Judges on Customary Law 97

5. The Influence of the Judgment both before and at UNCLOS I 98
  5.1 The Response to the Judgment before 1958 98
  5.2 The Judgment as a Basis for Codification at UNCLOS I 100

6. State Practice after UNCLOS I 102

7. The UN Sea-Bed Committee 104

8. Conclusions 106

Chapter 6
Special Regimes of Passage under Longstanding Treaties

1. Introduction 109

2. The Turkish Straits 110
  2.1 Evolution of a Treaty Regime for Passage through the Straits 110
  2.2 The Montreux Convention 111
    2.2.1 Special Rules for the Free Passage of Warships 112
      2.2.1(a) Capital Ships 112
      2.2.1(b) Aircraft Carriers 112
      2.2.1(c) Warships in Time of War 113
    2.2.2 Authorization for Civil Aviation 113
    2.2.3 Merchantmen 113
    2.2.4 The Convention and the Right of Innocent Passage 114
3. The Danish Belts and the Sound
   3.1 The Immemorial Sound Dues Charged on Foreign Merchantmen 115
   3.2 Redemption of the Sound Dues 116
   3.3 Freedom of Passage under the Treaties 116
   3.4 Danish Regulations Respecting Foreign Warships 117
   3.5 The Great Belt Bridge 118
      3.5.1 The 1857 Treaty Regime Revisited 118
      3.5.2 The Scope of the Alleged Special Regime and the Passage of Finnish Oil Rigs 119
      3.5.3 Reasons Behind the International Court's Refusal to Indicate Interim Measures 120
   3.6 The 1857 Treaties are the Foundation of a Special Regime 120

4. The Strait of Magellan
   4.1 International Constraints on the Control of the Coastal States 121
   4.2 The Right of Passage under the Treaty of 1881 122
   4.3 Does Freedom of Passage Embrace the Right of Overflight and the Right to Designate Traffic Separation Schemes (TSSs)? 123
   4.4 The Dedication of Straits to International Navigation 124

5. Other Straits where Treaties have been Applied 125
   5.1 The Strait of Gibraltar 125
   5.2 The Strait of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba 127
   5.3 Miscellaneous 127

Chapter 7
UNCLOS III and the Regime of Transit Passage

1. Introduction 129

2. Genesis: the Formulation of the New Concept of Transit Passage 130
   2.1 The Policy of Preserving Freedom of Passage 130
   2.2 Draft Articles of the United States and the Soviet Union 132
   2.3 The Agreed Form of Expression: a Simple Right of Passage 133
   2.4 The Notion of Transit Passage was not Regarded as Reflecting an Existing Practice as at 1974 134
   2.5 Acceptance of the New Right of Transit Passage at UNCLOS III 136

3. The Definition and Scope of the Right of Transit Passage 138
   3.1 The Right of Transit Passage 138
3.1.1 Definition 138
3.1.2 Beneficiaries of the Right 138
3.1.3 Transit Passage may end up in Ports within Straits 139

3.2 Straits Open to Transit Passage 140
3.2.1 The Geographical Dimension of Article 37 140
3.2.1(a) International Straits Between the High Seas and the Territorial Sea of a Foreign State 141
3.2.1(b) Straits Between an Island and its Mainland 141
3.2.2 The Juridical Limit 143
3.2.2(a) Treaty Regimes not Affected by the Right of Transit Passage 144
3.2.2(b) Treaty Regimes which may not Qualify as Cases under Article 35(c) 145

3.3 Activities which are neither an Exercise of, nor Incidental to the Right of Transit Passage 147
3.3.1 The Activities 147
3.3.2 Article 38(3) 148
3.3.3 Other Applicable Provisions 149

3.4 Transit Passage and Innocent Passage 150
3.4.1 Transit Passage cannot be Prevented on Account of Non-innocent Activities 150
3.4.2 Transit Passage is not Subject to Prior Authorization 150
3.4.3 Submarines may Transit Straits While Submerged 151
3.4.4 Freedom of Overflight can be Exercised by Virtue of the Right of Transit Passage 152

4. Duties for Ships in Transit Passage 152
4.1 Which are the ‘Generally Accepted’ International Conventions as Referred to in Article 39(2)? 153
4.2 Prior Authorization for Scientific Research and Survey: Article 40 154

5. Duties for Aircraft in Transit Passage 155
5.1 Article 39(3)(a) 155
5.2 Article 39(3)(b) 156

6. The Practice of Traffic Separation: Article 41 157

7. Laws and Regulations of, and their Enforcement by, Coastal States 159
7.1 Regarding Ships in Transit: Article 42 159
7.2 Aircraft 160
7.3 Enforcement of the Laws and Regulations 160
Contents xvii

7.3.1 The Literal Interpretation of Article 233 161
7.3.2 Article 234 163
7.4 Responsibility for Damage to the Marine Environment of the Coastal State: Article 42(5) 163

8. Cooperation between User and Coastal States: Article 43 165
9. No Suspension or Hampering of Transit Passage: Article 44 165
10. The Views of Governments on Part III at the Conclusion of UNCLOS III 166

Chapter 8
The Regime of Transit Passage and Customary Law

1. Introduction 168
2. The Method for the Determination of Customary Law 169
3. The Right of Transit Passage in State Practice 171
   3.1 Antigua and Barbuda 171
   3.2 Australia 171
   3.3 Canada 173
   3.4 Chile 175
   3.5 China 175
   3.6 Colombia 175
   3.7 Cuba 176
   3.8 Denmark 176
   3.9 Djibouti 177
   3.10 Egypt 177
   3.11 Finland 177
   3.12 France 178
   3.13 Greece 179
   3.14 Indonesia 179
   3.15 Iran 180
   3.16 Italy 181
   3.17 Japan 182
   3.18 Malaysia 183
   3.19 Morocco 183
   3.20 The Netherlands 184
   3.21 Oman 185
   3.22 Panama 185
   3.23 Papua New Guinea (PNG) 186
   3.24 The Philippines 186
   3.25 Republic of Korea 187
   3.26 Russia 187
3.27 Sao Tomé and Principe 187
3.28 Spain 188
3.29 Switzerland 189
3.30 Thailand 189
3.31 Trinidad and Tobago 190
3.32 Turkey 190
3.33 The United Kingdom 191
3.34 The United States 192
3.35 Venezuela 195
3.36 Yemen 196

4. Evaluation of State Practice in the Light of the Concept of International Custom 197

4.1 The Criterion of Generality 197
   4.1.1 Certain States Implement the Regime of Transit Passage Embodied in the CLOS as Customary Law 198
   4.1.2 The Right of Transit Passage is Accepted as a Customary Law Right, Subject to Conditions that are not Provided by the CLOS 198
   4.1.3 Certain States Regard the Regime of Transit Passage Exclusively as a Part of the CLOS 199
   4.1.4 The Right of Transit is Founded in the CLOS, Subject to Conditions which are, however, not Contained in the CLOS 199
   4.1.5 Those States whose Position is Uncertain and who are not Parties to the Convention 200

4.2 Consistency and Uniformity 200

4.3 The Opinio Juris Sive Necessitatis 202
   4.3.1 The Professed Opinio Juris 202
   4.3.2 The Role of Acquiescence 202

4.4 Section 2 of Part III as Emergent Customary Law? 204

4.5 Codification Treaties and Treaties for the Progressive Development of International Law 205

4.6 Writers 206
   4.6.1 The Regime of Transit Passage Reflects an Existing Practice 206
   4.6.2 The Regime of Transit Passage has become a Part of Customary Law since 1982 206
   4.6.3 The Majority Opinion: the Regime of Transit Passage was an Invention at UNCLOS III and is yet to become a Part of Customary Law 207