CONTENTS

Introduction 1

Chapter I.

Anglo-Saxon Legal Precedents: The Problems of Language and Custom from King Alfred’s Time 11

- Saxon and Danish languages 13
- Aethelbehrt and Augustine: Old English 14
- Danish Laws and customs: the Danelaw 16

Chapter II.

The Norman Conquest and Saxon Law: Abrupt Change or Assimilation? 19

- The relationships: Edward the Confessor 19
- The ships: logistics and transport 21
- Hastings: King Harold Godwin 24
- The end of Saxon Common Law 26
- The Witanagemot: form and function 26
- Domesday and demolition 28

Chapter III.

Clerical v. Secular Law and the Problems of Jurisdiction: Knights and Priests from William Rufus to Stephen 35

- The castles 36
- William Rufus 36
- Knights, Priests, and the Crusades 37
  - Anglo-Saxon Chronicles 38
- The Crusades 38
- Henry I 40
- King Stephen 41
Chapter IV.

Jurisprudential Watershed: The Reign of Henry II and the Revolution in Writs

The Hegelian principle
Henry II and "justices in eyre"
Saxon writs and customs
Justiciars
The melding of languages
The revolution in writs
Writ of Novel Disseisin
Writ returns
Criminous clerics and Thomas à Becket
Ranulphus de Glanville

Chapter V.

Richard, John, Crusaders, and Irish Law: Fait Accompli Legatus

The Third Crusade and massive ransom
Couer de Lion and the eyeres
King John
Vassalage and excommunication
Irish Brehon law and disseisin
St. Patrick and the Senchus Mor
Magna Carta and the barons

Chapter VI.

Judicial Craftsmanship from Glanville to Bracton: Sheriffs, Judges, and Lawyers

Bracton's treatise and the Irish Charter
Common Law codification - Anglo-Saxon laws
Brehon Codes and lex talionis
Sheriffs and the Common Law
King Canute, frankpledge, and hustings
Judges and the entry of commoners
Irish judicial procedures
Lawyers and miles literatus
Serjeants-at-law, lawyers, pleaders
Novae Narrationes, lawyers, and Brehons 92

Chapter VII.

Henry III, the Writ of Trespass, and the Impact of the Templars 99

The rise of universities and scientific investigation 100
Acquinas, Grossteste, and Bracton 100
Barons, Court of Common Pleas, and the monumental Writ of Trespass 101
  Trespass de Bonis Asportatis 103
  Trespass per Quare Servitium Amisit 103
  Trespass Quare Clausum Fregit 104
  Trespass Vi et Armis 104
The rebellion of Simon de Montfort 105
King Henry and the Templars 106

Chapter VIII.

Cathedrals and Construction: Obligato Quasi ex Contractu 113

Religious bedrock, law, and the church 114
Cathedrals, the “medieval miracle” 114
Architects, master masons, implied contracts 116
The enigma of freemasonry, de jure and de facto 118
Engineers and Villard de Honnecourt 120
Euclid, Vitruvius, and contract law 120
The Regius poem and assumpsit 122

Chapter IX.

Edward I and Quo Warranto: English and French Law 129

Quo warranto writs and feudal overlays 129
Statutes of Mortmain and Quia Emptores 131
French law and social conditions 132
Corruption and tallage 133
Scotland, Wales, and the Templars 134
Philip IV, Clement V, and the great conspiracy 135
Legal problems over the Templars and the legal significance of “dying declarations” 138
Chapter X.

Nullus Justitio Omnibus: The Dreadful Century

- Bannockburn, regicide, and simony 147
- Avignon, Black Plague, rapacity 148
- Emerging mercantilism and banking 149
- The metaphor of Common Law 151
- Wat Tyler's rebellion, Statute of Laborers, poll taxes and anarchy 153
- Middle English and the Common Law 155
- Justices-of-the-Peace and Latin, French, and English in the courts 156
- Chaucer and the rise of Middle-English 156
- The rise of the English Parliament 159
- Lords Appellant, Gaunt, and Bolingbroke 160

Chapter XI.

Medievalism to Modern State: Ad Vitam Aut Culpam

- Wars of the Roses and the decline of legalism 169
- Bosworth field and misuse of the Common Law 173
- Henry VII and the return to law and stability 174
- Henry VIII and royal absolutism 175
  - Statutes of Praemunire and Provisors 175
  - Wolsey, Cromwell, and More 176
- Habeas corpus and its antecedents 177
- Cromwell and church property confiscation 178
  - Frankalmoign and Henry's enrichment 179
- Sir Thomas More's legacies 180

Chapter XII.

Tudors to Stuarts: Lord Coke and the Law

- The resurrection of the Common Law 187
- Queen Mary and lukewarm Catholicism 187
- Queen Elizabeth and the Golden Age 188
  - Resurgence of the House of Commons 188
  - Mercantilism and exploration 189
  - Cabot and Drake 189
Hugo Grotius and International law 190
Edward Coke and Francis Bacon 192
The Trial of Robert Devereaux, Earl of Essex 192
Legal geniuses, different approaches 194
Coke's attacks in the Guy Fawkes case 194
The "knight errant" of English law 195
Institutes, rights of the English people 196
Exegesis of Magna Carta 197
Libertarian legalism and natural law 197
Lex Regia v. Case of Proclamations 197
Coke's thesis of Common Law antiquity and the rule of law 198
Shakespeare as transitional figure 199
Contributions to Modern English 199
Human psychology and the law 200
Philological analyses 200
Depth of Shakespeare's legal knowledge 201
Butterfield, Whig history, and the Common Law 203

Conclusion: Common Law Legacies: Blackstone and Holmes 211
Two inheritors of the ancient jurisprudence and their common ground 211
The Commentaries and the basis of English law 212
Modern British jurisprudence: leges folia memoria et usu retinabant 212
Alfred's Liber Judicialis and Saxon Common Law 212
Alfred as legum Anglicarum conditor and Edward the Confessor as restitutor 213
Blackstone following Coke in immemorial usage 214
Holmes following Blackstone - deodand theory 214
deadands and damages and a millenium of Common Law 215
Magna Carta, John Locke, and the American Constitution 215
Inter vivos, bailment, and liability 216
Adverse possession, trespass, assumpsit 217
Holmes summation of English Common Law 217
Shaw v. Director of Public Prosecutions 218
King's Bench and the custos morum 218
Residual power of the Common Law 219
The House of Lords and the Common Law 219
U.S. Commonwealth v. Mochan and the Common Law 219
Aethelbehrt, Augustine, Alfred, and Bede 220
Glanville, Bracton, Coke, Blackstone and Holmes 220
Holmes’ tracing U.S. Common Law from England 220

Bibliography 227

Index 241