Bouncers

Violence and Governance in the Night-time Economy

DICK HOBBS
PHILIP HADFIELD
STUART LISTER
SIMON WINLOW
Contents

Introduction

1 Let the Good Times Roll: Liminality and the Night-time Economy
   ‘Let’s go get stoned’ Ray Charles
   Crawling from the wreckage: cultural industries and urban regeneration
   The business of pleasure: communities of consumption in every-night-life
   Good time working
   The night-time economy
   Regulation of the night-time economy
   The new urban governance
   Booze, the urban night, and the human ecology of violence
   Public police: the night-time omission
   Receiving shadows
   And one more for the road

A Case Study of Manchester

2 After-dark ‘Fun’ and its Control in the Industrial City
   The industrial city
   Leisure in the industrial city
   The ‘dance craze’

3 Post-industrial Manchester: From Cotton to Carlsberg
   The phoenix and the night-owl
   Madchester
   Urban ‘exotica’
   Gaychester
   The number of licensed premises
   The number of consumers
   The economic value of the night-time economy
   A new urbanity?
Dodgin’ the rain and bullets 88
Gangchester 89
Gunchester 91
Street violence, alcohol, and young men: an old problem for the ‘new’ city 99
The Manchester Citycentresafe Initiative 106
Conclusion 107

4 Tommy Smith’s Story: Four Decades On The Door 109

5 A Word At The Door: Bouncers On Their Work 119
Access denied 120
The barred 123
Local knowledge 127
Other difficulties: disorderly women 132
Different doors 136
Dealing with trouble: talking nicely 138
Dealing with trouble: looking the part 142
Local bodies 145
Dealing with trouble: rough and tumble 147
Dealing with trouble: fighting 151
The night-time excuse me 153
Violent night 157
The moral mandate of bouncing 162

6 Manners Maketh the Man: Licensing ‘Door Supervisors’ and the Discourses of Professionalism and Safety 165
Introduction 165
Context: situating the registration agenda 167
Registration as a regulatory mechanism 169
Legal powers to regulate and the coverage shortfall 174
The vetting requirement 177
The training requirement 182
Training in the ways of the law: ‘justice’, culture, and commercial confidences 187
Let’s get physical: training to be (like) Steven Seagal 192
Watching the watchers: enforcement, revocation, and accountability 196
Market development, market diversification, and the division of labour 203
Licensing badges: symbols of safety, symptoms of threat 207
7 Market Force: Class, Violence, and Liminal Business
on the Night-time Frontier
Class, commerce, and violent competence 211
Pauline’s story: where security meets protection 212
The muscle market 219
Bouncing as class work 222
Market force 225
Bouncing as police work 231
The monopoly of muscle 234
Frontier business 237
Door war 240
Conclusion: class, capital, and trajectories of force 242

8 Night Futures: The Marketization of License and Control 245
Development, diversification, and homogeneity 246
Contemporary controls 248
So, you think you’re tough? 253
Going with the flow 258
(De)regulating the night-time city 261

9 Big People, Dirty Work: A Conclusion 269
Win or lose we are on the booze: a moral contradiction 270
Night moves 276
The queue for the last kebab 277

References 281

Index 315