Contents

---

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Table of Cases</th>
<th>xiii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Table of Legislation</td>
<td>xviii</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1. Introduction—Consistency of Principle in Corporate Insolvency 1
   1. Introduction 1
   2. The role of insolvency law in society 2
   3. The place of 'equality'
      a. Liberty 7
      b. Reasonableness 8
      c. Equality 9
   4. Could insolvency law really be consistent? 10
   5. Constructive interpretation 17
   6. Some comments on the role of efficiency 20
   7. An overview of the book 27

2. The Creditors' Bargain and the Collectivity of the Liquidation Regime 32
   1. Introduction 32
   2. The Creditors' Bargain 33
   3. Fundamentals of the Creditors' Bargain 37
   4. Consent
      a. Mere preferences 41
      b. Varieties of consent 43
      c. Time for the determination of self-interest 47
      d. Level at which self-interest is to be reckoned 47
   5. The normative appeal of the ex ante position 49
   6. The Creditors' Bargain as description 56
   7. Conclusion 59

3. The Authentic Consent Model—Justifying the Collective Liquidation Regime 61
   1. The plot 62
   2. The cast 68
   3. The characters 70
4. The stage
   a. Rationality 72
   b. Dramatic Ignorance 73
   c. The choice position 75
5. The performance 82
6. The denouement 86
7. Conclusion 90

4. The Pari Passu Principle and its Relationship with Other Methods of Insolvency Distribution 92
   1. Introduction 92
   2. The myth of pari passu distribution 96
   3. The immunity/priority fallacy 102
   4. The pari passu principle in action? 106
   5. Fairness as 'equality' 116
   6. The role of 'equality' 123
   7. The removal of tax claims preferences 128
   8. Conclusion 132

5. The Priority of Secured Credit 133
   1. Introduction 133
   2. The pari passu myth again and the 'privilege view' of security interests 136
   3. Tort creditors and the Exploitation Hypothesis 138
      a. Secured credit and large firms 139
      b. Strategic liquidation and small firms 145
   4. The Exploitation Hypothesis and 'uninformed' creditors 152
      a. Uninformed in the market 153
      b. Uninformed because 'unsophisticated' 156
   5. 'Non-adjusting' creditors and the Inefficiency Hypothesis 160
      a. The relationship between risk, security, and interest rates 162
      b. Monitoring inefficiencies? 171
   6. Informal 'rescues', trade creditors, and the bank's share 175
   7. Beginning the affirmative case for the priority of secured lending 179
   8. Conclusion 186

6. Administrative Receivership and the Floating Charge 188
   1. Introduction 188
   2. The mysterious floating charge 188
7. Administration

1. Introduction
2. Motivation and rationale for the introduction of the new procedure
3. Entry into administration
4. The administrator's duty to act rationally
   a. The statutory hierarchy
   b. The administrator as fiduciary
   c. Providing content to the duty to act rationally
   d. Rationality requirements in public and private law
5. Choosing between objectives
6. Creditor voting
   a. The position of unsecured creditors
   b. Balancing the interests of secured creditors
   c. Relationship between creditor voting and the administrator's duties
7. The administrator's incentives and challenges to his decisions
8. Conclusion

1. Introduction
2. What is wrong with redistribution?
3. Are the wrongful trading provisions redistributive?
4. Motivation costs and the wrongful trading provisions
5. Predictions and observations
   a. The influence of the market for managerial labour
   b. The role of secured credit
6. Perverse incentives
   a. The punishment effect
Contents

b. The delay effect 299
  c. The haste effect 301
7. Conclusion 302

9. Adjusting Transactions Involving Distressed Companies 305
   1. Introduction 305
   2. Rationale 306
      a. Initial clue 306
      b. The group meant to be protected 308
      c. The law’s general strategy 310
   3. Transactions at an undervalue 312
      a. Understanding what constitutes a ‘transaction’: ‘Mutuality’ 312
      b. Understanding what constitutes a ‘transaction’: Linked events 318
      c. Ex post facto events 323
   4. Voidable preferences 326
      a. The aims of preference law and creditor equality 326
      b. Designing a defensible preference law 332
   5. Conclusion 338

Bibliography 341

Index 353