14 Conclusion

14.1 Criticisms
   14.1.1 Paucity of economic analysis
   14.1.2 View that any restriction of conduct infringes Article 81(1)
      14.1.2.1 The Courts' analysis has been more helpful than that of the Commission
   14.1.3 Need to analyse ex ante at the time commitments are made
   14.1.4 Hostile attitude to export bans and deterrents
   14.1.5 Article 82 is intended to protect consumers not particular competitors
      14.1.5.1 Duty to supply narrowed
      14.1.5.2 Predation illegal only if recoupment
      14.1.5.3 Discrimination forbidden very widely—Is the prohibition limited to Article 82 in combination with Article 86?
   14.1.5.4 Rebates after Michelin II and British Air
   14.1.5.5 Joint dominant position

14.2 Steps taken by the Commission to meet the criticisms
   14.2.1 Old group exemptions
   14.2.2 New group exemptions since 1999
   14.2.3 Regulation 1/2003
   14.2.4 Appointment of Chief Economist and Peer Review
   14.2.5 Review of the Application of Article 82
   14.2.6 Cartels and the Leniency Programme
