Magne Frostdad

Jus in bello
after September 11, 2001

The relationship between jus ad bellum and jus in bello and the requirements for status as prisoner of war

Nomos
6. What is the relationship between jus ad bellum and jus in bello? 107

6.1 Introduction 107
6.2 The current situation 108
6.3 Potential developments 110
6.3.1 The de-colonization era 110
6.3.2 Identification by the Security Council 111
6.3.2.1 General observations 111
6.3.2.2 Self-defense 111
6.3.2.3 Aggression, breach or threat to the international peace 111
6.3.3.4 Non-international armed conflicts 114

7. Partial international personality for certain terrorist organizations? 116

7.1 General observations 116
7.2 Traditional considerations 116
7.3 The consequences of 11 September 2001 117
7.3.1 Jus ad bellum 117
7.3.2 Jus in bello 121

Part 3 - The Requirements for the Status as Combatant 124

1. Introduction 124

2. The historical development 127

2.1 The pre-1949 regime 130
2.2 In the aftermath of world wars: The 1949 regime 132
2.2.1 General aspects 132
2.2.2 Levée en masse 134
2.2.3 Non-recognized governments or authorities 139
2.2.4 Regular armed forces 140
2.2.5 Irregular armed forces 144
2.2.5.1 General aspects 144
2.2.5.2 The requirements for status as prisoner of war 146
2.2.5.2.1 Introduction 146
2.2.5.2.2 Collective requirements 148
2.2.5.2.2.1 Organization 148
2.2.5.2.2.2 Belonging to a state 150
2.2.5.2.2.3 Commanded by a person responsible for his subordinates 152
2.2.5.2.3 Individual and collective requirements 152
2.2.5.2.3.1 Fixed distinctive sign recognizable at a distance 153
2.2.5.2.3.2 Carrying arms openly 157
2.2.5.2.3.3 Respecting jus in bello 158
2.2.5.2.3.4 Lack of allegiance to the custodial power 160
2.2.5.3 Additional categories of entitlement 161
2.2.6 The existence of a half-way house between combatants and civilians 162
2.2.6.1 Traditional challenges 162
2.2.6.2 Special challenges in cases of humanitarian interventions 163
2.3 De-colonization and the lifting of 'the white man's burden':
   The 1977 regime 165
2.3.1 The historical background 165
2.3.2 The new requirements 167
2.3.2.1 General aspects 167
2.3.2.2 Belonging to a party 168
2.3.2.3 Organization 169
2.3.2.4 Subject to a command responsible for its subordinates 169
2.3.2.5 To respect jus in bello 170
2.3.2.6 Differentiate oneself from the civilian population 171
2.3.2.6.1 General aspects 171
2.3.2.6.2 The minimum rule 172
2.3.2.6.3 The normal situation 177
2.3.2.7 Lack of allegiance to the custodial power 179
2.3.3 The existence of a half-way house between combatants and civilians 180
2.3.3.1 General observations 180
2.3.3.2 Special challenges in cases of humanitarian interventions 180
2.4 Other groups of special interest 180
2.4.1 Civilians following the troops 181
2.4.2 The status of some neutral citizens 181
2.4.3 Mercenaries 182
2.4.4 Deserters and defectors 183
2.4.5 Spies 185
2.4.6 Personnel refusing to surrender 187
2.4.7 Medical and religious personnel 187
2.4.8 Enemy merchant-men and the crews of enemy civilian aircraft 188
2.4.9 Higher officials of the enemy government 188
2.4.10 Diplomatic representatives of neutral nations 189
2.4.11 Journalists 189
3.0 New views for a new day: The post 11 September 2001 situation 190
3.1 General observations 190
3.2 Have any changes been undertaken to the requirements to status as prisoner of war and if so, what would these be? 191
4.0 The application of the prisoner of war regime as a matter of goodwill 194

Conclusions 197

References 199