Enforcing Obligations Erga Omnes in International Law

Christian J. Tams
Walther Schücking Institute
University of Kiel (Germany)
Contents

Foreword
Preface
Notes on citation
Table of cases
List of abbreviations

Introduction

Part I  Background to the erga omnes concept

1. Clarifications
   1.1 Countermeasures and ICJ proceedings
   1.2 The notion of standing
      1.2.1 Standing as a normative concept
      1.2.2 Standing as a flexible concept
      1.2.3 The diversity of rules governing standing
      1.2.4 Interim conclusions
   1.3 Standing to enforce individual legal positions
      1.3.1 The basis of the distinction
      1.3.2 Categories of individual legal positions
         1.3.2.a Bilateral legal rules and similar situations
         1.3.2.b Special injury
   1.4 Concluding observations
2. Traditional approaches to standing
   2.1 Restrictive tendencies
      2.1.1 A structural analysis of multilateral obligations
         2.1.1.a Three categories of obligations
         2.1.1.b The legal regime
2.1.2 A restrictive interpretation of treaty provisions: the South West Africa case 63

2.2 Expansive tendencies 69
  2.2.1 Treaty-based rules of standing 70
    2.2.1.a Unequivocal treaty clauses 71
    2.2.1.b Equivocal clauses broadly interpreted: the Wimbledon case 76
  2.2.2 The position in the absence of special treaty regulations 80
    2.2.2.a Interdependent obligations 80
    2.2.2.b Status treaties 80
      Background 81
      Standing to react against breaches 83
    2.2.2.c The duty to comply with judgments of the International Court of Justice 87
    2.2.2.d Basic humanitarian standards 89

2.3 Concluding observations 94

Part II Legal issues raised by the erga omnes concept 97

3 Distinguishing types of erga omnes effects 99
  3.1 Terminological imprecision 101
  3.2 The traditional meaning of the term 103
  3.3 'Other' erga omnes effects in the ICJ's jurisprudence 106
    3.3.1 The traditional meaning 107
    3.3.2 The territorial restriction of obligations 110
    3.3.3 The descriptive function 112
  3.4 Concluding observations 115

4 Identifying obligations erga omnes 117
  4.1 The question of sources 120
    4.1.1 The Court's jurisprudence 121
    4.1.2 Further considerations 123
  4.2 Distinguishing obligations erga omnes from other customary obligations 128
    4.2.1 The structural approach 130
      4.2.1.a The strong version 131
      4.2.1.b The moderate version 133
      4.2.1.c Interim conclusion 135
    4.2.2 The material approach 136
6.2 International practice

6.2.1 Specific instances of state practice

6.2.1.a Actual violations

Western countries – Uganda (1971–1978) 210
European countries – Liberia (1980) 211
G77 and socialist countries – colonial regimes (1970s–1990s) 211
Western countries – Poland (1981) 213
Western countries – Argentina (1982) 215
Western countries – Soviet Union (1983) 217
Western countries – South Africa (1985–1986) 217
Various countries – Iraq (1990) 219
African States – Burundi (1996) 221
European countries – Yugoslavia (1998) 223

6.2.1.b Statements implying a right to take countermeasures

G7 declarations on aircraft hijacking (1978/1981) 225
Western countries – Iran (1979–1980) 226

6.2.1.c Actual non-compliance justified differently

Netherlands–Surinam (1982) 227
European countries–Yugoslavia (1991) 228

6.2.1.d An assessment

A preliminary evaluation 230
Counter-arguments examined 231
The relevance of the erga omnes concept 232
The selectivity of practice 234
The dominance of western practice 235
A lack of opinio juris 237
The requirement of collective action 240
Interim conclusion 241
6.2.2 Governments' comments on the ILC's work on State responsibility
   6.2.2.a Comments made during the first reading 242
   6.2.2.b Comments made during the second reading 245
   6.2.2.c Interim conclusions 248
6.3 Concluding observations 249
7 Erga omnes enforcement rights and competing enforcement mechanisms
   7.1 Identifying areas of conflict
      7.1.1 Overlapping legal rules 256
      7.1.2 Different enforcement rights 258
         7.1.2.a Treaty-based systems of enforcement: a survey 259
         7.1.2.b Specific types of conflict 261
   7.2 Addressing conflicts 263
      7.2.1 Contracting out of decentralised enforcement by States 263
         7.2.1.a Direct recourse by individuals 263
         7.2.1.b Institutional enforcement 264
         7.2.1.c Summary 268
      7.2.2 Contracting out of specific forms of decentralised enforcement 268
         7.2.2.a General considerations 268
            The exclusivity thesis 269
               Alleged support in international jurisprudence 269
               Its rejection 271
            Guidelines for the analysis of specific conflicts 276
               Explicit conflict rules 276
               Effectivity 277
               Formal indications of effectivity 278
               The character of the breach 278
            Summary 279
         7.2.2.b Contracting out of ICJ proceedings 279
            Non-exclusivity clauses 280
            Implied non-exclusivity 282
            Flexible exclusivity clauses 283
            Interim conclusion 286