Re-Thinking the Political Economy of Punishment
Perspectives on Post-Fordism and Penal Politics

ALESSANDRO DE GIORGI
University of Bologna, Italy

ASHGATE
Contents

Acknowledgements vii
Introduction ix

1 The Political Economy of Penality and the Sociology of Punishment – Past and Present

1. Introduction
2. Penality and the Critique of Political Economy
3. Georg Rusche and Otto Kirchheimer: Punishment and Social Structure and the Foundation of the Political Economy of Punishment
4. The Political Economy of Punishment and the New Histories of Punishment
   - A Just Measure of Pain
   - Discipline and Punish
   - The Prison and the Factory
5. Political Economies of Contemporary Penality
   - Incarceration and Unemployment: The United States
   - Incarceration and Unemployment: Other Contexts
   - Variations on a Theme
   - A Return to Rusche and Kirchheimer?
6. Beyond the Political Economy of Punishment?

2 Post-Fordism and the Emergence of the Multitude

1. Post-Fordism: A Regime of Surplus
2. Social Surplus: ‘The New Excluded’
4. The Post-Fordist Labour Force as a Multitude

3 The Government of Surplus – Preliminary Incursions in the Field of Post-Fordist Social Control

1. From the ‘Discipline of Scarcity’ to the ‘Government of Surplus’
2. Control as ‘Non-Knowledge’
3. The Panopticon and Beyond: Signs of a Post-Disciplinary Order
4. The Punitive Metropolis
5. Bridling the Net

4 Mass Confinement and Actuarial Penology

1. Mass Imprisonment: From the Welfare State to the Penal State?
2. Incarcerating Risk: The Actuarial Prison
5 The Criminalisation of International Migrations: Towards an Actuarial Model of Control? 111
Introduction: Migrations in a Global Economy 111
European Immigration Control: Towards a 'Penal State'? 117
Immigration as an 'Ontological Crime' 124
The War on Immigrants across Europe and the United States 126
Detention and Expulsion as Actuarial Technologies 129

Conclusion 139
Bibliography 145
Index 163